Army, Navy Gridders Clash to Aid Unemployed

SPANISH TROOPS DEFEAT REBELS

Today

No, No, Professor. Dole, and Bread Line. Eat Sugar!

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

PROF. EINSTEIN urges the United States to prevent wars.

How should the United States prevent wars, which start in Europe, or elsewhere, outside of the United States?

Should we become mixed up in them, and again send ten billions of dollars, and three millions of men, as we did last time? No, thanks.

HOW COULD we prevent them? An Italian is arrested in France with plans of an important French naval base, and other plans for destroying that base with Italian airplanes.

A smaller spark than that has started a war. Could we prevent it?

A foolish old farmer hitched himself up in a yoke with a bull calf, and, as he went down hill, yelled: "Stop us, somebody." He should not have hitched himself up.

Europe should not go to war, and Prof. Einstein should not expect us to prevent the nations from fighting each other.

That is their business, not ours. He would not say.

"I wish some American would prevent my fighting a friend in Poland."

CONGRESSMAN TILSON says the McNary bill is the "dole" in disguise. For some reason, every professional "one hundred per cent American" seems to have a horror of the dole.

Is the dole so much worse than the bread line? Is it better to let a man stand in line two or three hours to get a miserable cup of coffee and a piece of bread than to give him and his family, without waste, and directly, enough to keep from starving—THAT IS, IF YOU REALLY WANT TO KEEP HIM FROM STARVING.

Why worry so much about the dole if you have conditions that demand it?

BY THE WAY, Senator Borah warns this government that, if it insists on boycotting Russia, and hampering trade with Russia, somebody else will get the trade that Russia, with decent treatment, would give to us. And if that happens, according to Senator Borah, we really shall have the dole. Wisely he advises developing, not restricting trade. The Soviet with its theories is no worse than the czars, with their KNOUT.

FOR YOUR HEALTH'S sake remember the statement of an able doctor: "Sugar is the best muscle food." The heart is a muscle and if illness has weakened that muscle, see that you have plenty of sugar or of food or drink containing sugar.

If you are tired in the afternoon, a piece of chocolate, or a pure candy, or a drink well sweetened, will help to dispel fatigue and supply renewed vigor.

THE MAN or woman past 50, according to the late Dr. Murphy, great Chicago surgeon, should find time in the middle of the day or early afternoon for a nap, however short. Ten or even five minutes will restore nervous energy and prolong life.

It was because he would not take his own advice, and moderate his ceaseless working, that Dr. Murphy died too young.

R. A. CARRINGTON, Jr., publisher of the Oakland Post-Enquirer, active newspaper, would like you to know that Oakland doesn't propose to take any "depression" lying down. Yesterday, Mr Adolph Zukor broke ground for a new three million dollar Oakland theater, which is part of the twenty million dollar building program now under way in Oakland, in Alameda County.

BANDITS ROB BANK, GET $1,000

Customers and Clerks Herded Into Vault as Five Thugs Scoop Up Money, Flee

Five bandits held up the Perry State Bank, 3908 Perrysville avenue, this morning, herded employes and customers into a vault, scooped up all loose money and fled with a sum estimated at $1,000.

The robbers escaped in an automobile which had been held with the motor running by a sixth member of the gang, according to eye witnesses.

Several women and children were among the customers in the bank shortly before 10:30 a. m. when the bandits entered quietly. Three approached the teller's windows and pointed guns at the employes behind the cages. The other two held up the customers. The bandits commanded:

"Stick 'em up and don't move."

Four employes of the bank, two employes of the Perry Real Estate company, which has offices adjoining, and the customers were ordered to enter the vault in the rear of the banking room.

The leader of the bandits said:

"If anyone of you come out of that vault before 10 minutes, it will be just too bad."

The robbers grabbed all the loose cash in sight and stuffed it in a large black suitcase.

They made no attempt to rob the customers or the bank employes of their personal funds or valuables.

After several minutes one of the prisoners in the vault said:

"I guess they have all gone now; let's get out of here."

The door, which had not been locked was shoved open.

WOMEN WEEP

One or two of the women and children cried but there was no confusion, according to bank officials.

Zittel Robbery Loot Placed at $150,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(INS.)—An itemized checkup today revealed that the two bandits who held up Mrs. Martha Beatrice Zittel, publisher's wife, stole $150,000 in gems and not $100,000 worth as was originally believed.

Hopes that the audacious pair who gained access to the Zittel apartment by posing as delivery boys bringing a table, might be apprehended through fingerprints went glimmering today. Investigation revealed the two bandits wore gloves and left no markings on the objects they touched.

MASKED THUGS LOOT HOME

Bandits again ran rampant in the city last night and early today, terrorizing an East End family in their home and staging holdups in various sections of the city.

In a drastic move to curb crime in McKeesport, Chief of Police John J. Whalen ordered police to "shoot to kill." Several patrolmen were added to the plainclothes force by the chief.

TERRORIZE FAMILY

When Mrs. Rose Thomas, of 440 South Graham street, answered the doorbell in her home last night, three armed men, their faces covered with handkerchiefs, rushed into the reception hall and ordered her to remain quiet. Instead she screamed, attracting her husband, John L. Thomas, president of the Greater Pittsburgh

Walsh Acts To Check Crime

The latest bank holdup today spurred Peter P. Walsh, superintendent of police, to order all motorcycle policemen to patol the city from 8 o'clock in the evening until 6 in the morning.

There are 20 men in the detail and they have been reporting at 3:30 and working until 1 p. m. The new order will remain in effect indefinitely. Walsh also ordered all officers to shoot if they see a holdup or robbery in progress.

Frank Boyd, inspector of detectives, lined up his full force this morning and ordered them to report for street duty every night. He told them no excuse, except serious illness, would be accepted for absence from duty.

Mellon Yacht Stops At Aviatrix's Haven

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 13.—James R. Mellon, accompanied by Ray Hilliard and Frank Guthrie, arrived here yesterday aboard the Mellon yacht "Vagabondia" from a three-weeks' cruise of the West Indies. The cruise included Andros Island, where Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller made a forced landing on her attempted plane flight from Havana to Pittsburgh. The party spent several days in the vicinity of the island.

2D POLICE ZONE IN NORTH SIDE

Disclosure that a new police district has been provided in the budget for the North Side brings into the open a situation that has been the subject of gossip among politicians — the "solid" North Side is split politically.

With Federal street as the dead line, a battle has been going on for months. Inspector of Police Charles H. Faulkner and his nephew, State Senator Samuel J. Grenet, and Dr. F. H. Frederick have been lined up on the one side, centered in the Twenty-second Ward, of which J. J. O'Donnell is chairman.

Robert J. Murray, chairman of the Twenty-third Ward, with Police Magistrate Ray E. Schneider, who is also alderman of the ward, oppose the Faulkner aggregation.

In the general election the bolting of Dr. Frederick and Senator Grenet to the Liberal ticket for

ARMY AND NAVY CLASH TO AID JOBLESS

Hope Gridiron Game Income May Hit $1,000,000 Mark; Teams Rated Even Match

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The thirty-first football clash between the Army and Navy today gives the unemployed a helping hand to the extent of $750,000. Some 70,000 persons purchased tickets for the Yankee Stadium.

In a season replete with the sensational, this renewal of relations between the two government academies was the grand climax, offering first a closely contested struggle between two evenly matched teams, and secondly a chance to aid a worthy cause.

There were strong hopes that receipts not only from ticket sales, but from incidental concessions might swell to a total of $1,000,000.

ARMY FAVORED

Grover Whalen's committee in charge of arrangements has had a hard row to hoe. For some time the game failed to arouse the general interest that had been expected, perhaps because most experts predicted an overwhelming victory for the Army's huskies. The Army still was favored today.

PRISONER FLEES HOSPITAL

Humphrey Carson, 26, a Negro, of 1206 Hazel street, shot in the left leg when he broke away from a policeman after being arrested in connection with a Hazel street robbery Wednesday morning, escaped from Passavant Hospital early today. Hospital attaches said he wore only a night shirt.

Carson, with two others, had been arrested by Patrolman Stanley Fagerski. While standing at a police call box, Carson was said to have broken away from the policeman, who halted him with a shot in the leg. He was booked at Center Avenue Police Station as a suspicious person, and was sent to the hospital. No guard was placed over him, police said.

He was in a room on the first floor. Hospital attaches said they believed he escaped through the emergency room, the door of which had been left open when an emergency case was admitted a few minutes before.

Several persons visited Carson last night, they said.

Einstein Actually Talks So Anyone Can Understand

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The boat was tied up at the wharf for 24 hours before the professor validated it with mathematical certainty.

That's the relativity theory. If the boat ain't moving, and it's up against a wharf, there must be land near.

If Columbus had known this ratio he might have discovered America twice as often.

When reporters asked the professor personal questions all he did was laugh merrily.

Cowgirl?

MRS. TOM MIX

Tom Mix, movie cowboy, from New York answered his wife's divorce suit charges that he scared her with guns by charging that in 1925 she fired five shots and wounded him.

MIX SAYS WIFE SHOT HIM

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Tom Mix cowboy hero of the movies, today declared in an interview that whatever "gun twirling" took place in his Hollywood home was not entirely on his part, according to the News.

His wife, Mrs. Victorio Forde Mix, has filed suit for divorce in Los Angeles.

In the interview, according to the News, Mix said:

"I scared her by twirling guns in the house, did I? Let her tell you how she came within an inch of taking my life by firing five shots at me—all there were in one gun—back in 1925."

REVOLTERS FLEE AFTER BATTLE

Insurrectionists in Flight After Battle; Federals Capture 100 Prisoners

MADRID, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—In a furious battle near the town of Ayerbe at dawn today, Federal troops took 100 prisoners, seized rebel equipment and drove a revolting regiment of infantry back upon the garrison town of Jaca, where rebellion flared yesterday.

Gen. Berenguer, the prime minister, asserted that the engagement had terminated the revolt and that federal troops were in control of the Jaca area.

The prime minister made this announcement after a brief audience with King Alfonso this morning. The loyal troops from Saragossa, he said, continued a march on Jaca after the battle.

REBELS TRAPPED

It was a nice bit of tactics which routed the rebels, the general said. Two strong units converged upon Ayerbe from different angles and caught the rebel forces, about 21,000 men, in a sort of nutcracker at the Ayerbe Mountain pass. Gen. Jorge Fernandez Herdia was in command of the federals.

Eight rebel officers, none of whom was identified in the dispatches, were among the captives. They are to be courtmartialed immediately.

So far as could be learned in the face of demoralized communications, the mutiny had not spread beyond the province of Huesca, where the rebels, variously estimated at between 1,000 and 6,000, had massed their forces.

FRANCO LEADS REVOLT

The mutineers, censored information indicated, had only such arms and equipment as could be seized in the Jaca garrison, and the government professed confidence that the revolt would be put down speedily.

There were unverified reports that the uprising had extended to Saragossa, where Maj. Ramon Franco, the picturesque aviator, was said to be at the head of the

Dolores Costello To be Starred Alone

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Dolores Costello, who retired from screen stardom shortly after her marriage to John Barrymore, will return to motion picture work. A studio announcement today said she would not play with her husband, but would be starred in her own right.

Pilsudski Will Go Abroad for Rest

WARSAW, Poland, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The semi-official Polish Gazette today reported that Marshal Pilsudski, strong man of Polish politics and minister of war, would go abroad for a rest. His plans include a visit to the Madeira Islands.

Dancer Who Sued Earle Weds Flour Magnate's Son

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The marriage here yesterday of Dolores L. Salazar, 22, film actress, and John R. Holmes, 21, son of the late Payton R. Holmes, Minneapolis flour magnate, was revealed today by District Judge E. Orr, who performed the ceremony.

Miss Salazar announced her engagement to young Holmes last spring shortly after she had obtained $17,000 damages from Ferdinand Pinney (Affinity) Earle, artist now living in Paris, for alleged breach of a prenuptial agreement. The announcement, however, was denied by both Mrs. Payton Holmes and her son, the bridegroom, who were residing in Minneapolis where the young man attended the University of Minnesota.

Both young people gave their home addresses as Los Angeles.

The marirage recalled the lengthy trial of Miss Salazar's suit for damages against Earle. She charged she met him in 1926 and that he proposed to her, promising also to settle $15,000 on her before the marriage and agreeing to give her the lead in a motion picture he was producing. She said she accompanied him to Mexico City where a mock wedding was performed.

In his answer, made by deposition, Earle said he never had proposed marriage to Miss Salazar, but she "like a ripe peach, fell into my lap at my first smile."

Einstein at Opera, O. K.'s Relativity Definition

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Opera tempted Dr. Albert Einstein out of his ocean liner suite last night, and he went to the Metropolitan Opera House. Offered his choice of Wagner's "Siegfried" or Bizet's "Carmen," he preferred the latter.

He sat with his wife in a box in the Diamond Horseshoe. He rose and bowed to acknowledge applause when the audience discovered him there at the first act intermission, and after the performance he went backstage and paid his respects to Maria Jeritza, Austrian star, and her colleagues.

When William G. Guard, general factotum of the "Met," offered the scientist a one-sentence definition of reality—"There is no hitching post for the universe so far as we know"—Dr. Einstein laughed heartily, drew out a fountain pen and wrote beneath the definition in his native language:

"Read and found correct.
"A. EINSTEIN, 12-12-'30."

Today the city extends an official welcome to Dr. Einstein on the steps of City Hall at 11 o'clock. Late this afternoon he will speak by radio in German on "Palestine," under the auspices of the American Student Zionist Federation, and his wife will translate his address into English.

He has made no plans for tomorrow, and on Monday his liner, the Belgenland, continues to California, his American destination.

CONGRESS DUE TO DISPOSE OF RELIEF MEASURES NEXT WEEK

NEW ATTACK BY HOOVER FEARED

Prospect Worries Adherents Of President as Accord Between Houses is Sought

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—A week-end recess served today to postpone further moves in the delicate situation between President Hoover and the Senate.

Until next week also was passed the final clean-up of the administration unemployment and drought relief program, upon which the two branches of Congress must get together.

The possibility still existed President Hoover might strike again at his congressional opponents somewhat as he did last Tuesday, when he told the country what he thought of moves which interfere with his program. This prospect did not fail to stir uneasiness among his Senate supporters.

WATSON DENIES SPLIT

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, hastened to assert there was no real division between his group and Mr. Hoover and that he had served no ultimatum in the request Thursday that the President help his Senate aides by letting them in on plans for any such maneuvers as last Tuesday's attack.

There was a bare possibility that conferees of the House and Senate would get together today on amendments made by the latter to the public works emergency appropriation bill. In any case action by the two houses upon the report could not be obtained before next week.

Besides increasing the bill's total to $118,000,000, the Senate knocked out the clause granting power to the President to shift funds from one project to another. This change is viewed by the administration as likely to cut down actual relief. The House has disagreed with all the Senate's amendments.

HOUSE CUTS DROUGHT FUND

The drought bill, amended in committee to appropriate only $30,000,000 for loans, none applicable to food purchases, is to come up in the House Monday or Tuesday under the most stringent procedure the leaders can obtain. They are seeking to keep the Senate's $60,000,000 figure from getting tangled in the proceedings.

Although behind the Senate in action on relief legislation, the House is now two up in the supply bill score. To the billion dollar treasury-postoffice appropriation sent the Senate last week, the representatives late yesterday added the much smaller interior department measure.

Conferees on the Muscle Shoals question today were near agreement. They are now separated only by whether the plants government-produced power should be distributed over government or private transmission lines. The fertilizer plant would go to private interests under the prospective agreement.

Tax Deductions For Charity Opposed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The proposal of Secretary Mellon that Congress allow corporations to make deductions in their income tax for charitable gifts has met with opposition in the House Ways and Means Committee.

It is led by Representative Bacharach (Rep.), New Jersey, who said corporations had no right to spend money rightfully belonging to stockholders.

Repair Jail to Save Expense of Pursuits

VIRGINIA, Ill., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Five prisoners escaped from the county jail. The county board then voted to repair it, figuring it would be cheaper to do so than to spend money chasing fugitives.

THUGS TERRIFY FAMILY

Magnesia Company, and their three children, John, Jr., 14; Anna Marie, 9, and Girard, 7, who were at the dinner table.

One of the men struck Mrs. Thomas in the face. As Thomas and his eldest son ran into the hall, they were confronted by two men. One took $50 from Thomas' pocket and asked for more. Told that more money was hidden in a wardrobe drawer in a second floor bedroom, one of the thugs marched Thomas to the upper room. The thug took $450 from the drawer which comprised part of the family's Christmas savings.

While the robbery was in progress, the two other children rushed to the third floor which is occupied by their uncle Joseph Burns, his wife and a child.

BREAKS 'PHONE WIRES

Burns ran to the rear porch on the third floor, but his attempts to spread the alarm proved futile. The robber who led Thomas to the bedroom, after obtaining the cash which he counted before placing it into his pocket, tore an extension telephone from the wall as he ordered Thomas to walk down to the first floor. On the lower floor the robber found another telephone and tore off the wire. Mrs. Thomas, suffering shock and a bruised face, was treated by the family physician.

The bandits, reported to have been seen loitering in the neighborhood Thursday night, were in the Thomas home fully 15 minutes, police said. They escaped in an old automobile.

FIRES ON BANDITS

An automobile believed to have been occupied by three men who held up Albert Cook, of 3708 Fleetwood street, in the 1100 block of Herron avenue, and robbed him of $20, outdistanced a car carrying Patrolman McAfee, after a chase of several blocks early today. During the chase, which followed when Cook reported the holdup to McAfee a few minutes after it occurred, the patrolman fired two shots at the car.

M. G. Brown, a private policeman, fired four shots at a man who had broken a window of the Krason jewelry store at 738 East Ohio street, early today. The man fell after one of the shots, but regained his feet and escaped from the pursuing policeman.

DRUG STORE ROBBED

Entering the drug store of Robert Lee, at 2338 Carson street, two armed men ordered the proprietor to throw up his hands and looted the cash register of $10 last night.

A few minutes earlier the confectionery of Louis Stoller, at 5226 Broad street, was visited by three men. The bandits took $55 from the cash register and $20 from Stoller's pocket.

Bennie Erer, of 249 Mansion street, was robbed of $32 early today by two bandits who confronted him with revolvers while he was walking near his home He notified police at the Hazelwood station.

Installment Selling Upheld by Coolidge

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

Three or four years ago there began considerable discussion of the practice of installment sales. While the system was by no means new it was then being expanded into new fields with extraordinary rapidity and assumed such large proportions that it aroused considerable alarm. Some thought it might be undermining our whole credit structure. No definite and separate figures were obtainable as to the extent to which banks were involved and this raised the question of what funds were tied up in it. The developments of the past few months have demonstrated that there was nothing unsound in this movement. The precentage of losses has been insignificant. Probably of all commercial credits this form stands well toward the top in satisfactory results. Because installments have been paid most of the fear of it as a breeder of extravagance has been dispelled. Properly conducted it is no more subject to that criticism than the open account.

Calvin Coolidge

But the great lesson is the honesty and integrity of the people. The consuming public pay their debts. It is another powerful demonstration of the justification of faith and confidence in each other.

RASKOB, BRIDE TO LIVE IN 2 ROOMS

International News Service.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—John J. Raskob, Jr., 23-year-old son of the millionaire chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and his bride, who today were honeymooning on the Raskob private car "Skipaway" attached to the Federal Express en route to Connecticut, Delaware, or Washington, planned to return after their honeymoon trip to make their home in a modest two rooms of a typical New England home at North Chelmsford.

The bride, the former Miss Minerva Aaronson, 19-year-old New Haven (Conn.) stenographer, plans to learn the art of cooking under the tutelage of Mrs. Albert Shepherd, in whose home the newlyweds will live.

Following their quiet marriage in the rectory of St. John's Roman Catholic Church at North Chelmsford, five miles outside Lowell, young Raskob and his bride first visited the fiber plant where he works. The plant is only a short distance from the Shepherd home, so the young groom each morning and night will walk to work and then home again.

On her marriage day the former stenographer received her first taste of how millions command attention. Her wedding supper was staged in the de luxe private car, served by a Japanese servant and white-capped chefs.

At the wedding supper were the parents of the young groom, Mr. and Mrs. Raskob, and the mother of the bride, Mrs. Elizabeth Aaronson.

POWER BOARD QUIZ ENDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee completed its investigation of the qualifications of the five men nominated to the Power Commission as F. E. Bonner, executive secretary of the commission, announced he would relinquish his post because of criticism by members of the committee.

Opposition had formed against at least two of the five nominees when the hearings closed, with Frank R. McNinch, of North Carolina, characterizing himself as a "poor man's lawyer" who had no connection with the power interests and who had agreed to accept the nomination only as a "public duty."

Senator Hawes (Dem.), Missouri, announced he would oppose McNinch's confirmation. Several other committee members indicated they would oppose Marcel Garsaud, of Louisiana. The committee will vote on the nominations Monday.

OFFICIALS VIEW OVERMAN BIER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The President, the Cabinet, Supreme Court, the entire Senate membership and countless other officials bid farewell last night to Senator Overman, of North Carolina. They gathered around his casket.

"We loved him and we all mourn his passing," said Vice President Curtis. And Rev. Dr. Z. B. Phillips, the Senate chaplain, delivered a funeral oration. The veteran Democratic Senator died yesterday morning in his seventy-seventh year.

Today they were taking his body to Salisbury, N. C., which was his home even though he had been part of Washington for more than a quarter of a century. He was in the Senate 28 years. With him went his widow and three daughters and a score of the colleagues with whom he had so often exchanged pleasantry or sharp thrusts on the Senate floor.

Only one who would have gone stayed behind. The same age, but two years Overman's senior in the Senate, Furnifold M. Simmons was prevented by delicate health from escorting the body of his brother North Carolinian.

Hemphill did not promote harmony, if there was any disposition by either side to harmonize, said political experts. Mayor Charles H. Kline, although not admitting a motive, has solved the difficulty by creating the new police district.

It is said that State Senator James J. Coyne was the strategist who showed how the lower North Side could be carried in the general election without the assistance of Dr. Frederick and Faulkner.

The most prominent candidate for inspectorship of the new district is Capt. Anthony Block, who is on night duty in the North Side.

When Mayor Kline was asked about the new district he said:

"It may or may not be created. I cannot say at this time. When we have a new idea we have to incorporate it in the budget."

DILL ASSAILS COURT PLAN TONIGHT

Will Use Radio to Reveal Emphatic Disapproval of Idea by American People

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The emphatic way in which the American people have disapproved the League of Nations Court will be disclosed by Senator C. C. Dill (Dem.), of Washington, in a radio adress tonight.

Dill will speak over a country-wide network of the National Broadcasting Company at 7:45 eastern standard time.

An outspoken foe of the league tribunal, the Washington senator will show how the court has been overwhelmingly repudiated by the voters whenever the issue has been presented at the polls.

EDITORIAL OPINION

Dill will also answer the recent announcement of the American (Bok) Foundation to the effect that newspaper and editorial opinion in this country is strongly in favor of adhesion to the court. Advocates of the court are placing great stress on this newspaper survey in an effort to convince the Senate that there is a real public sentiment in its favor.

Meanwhile battle plans of the old Republican irreconcilable group for opposing ratification of the new World Court protocol today placed a new handicap on the already strained relations between President Hoover and his party leaders in the Senate.

OPPOSING HOOVER

The first session of the irreconcilables found three of the President's best-known spokesmen on Capitol Hill lining up in the forefront of the fight against the instrument, despite the President's appeal for approval of the Court. They were Senator James E. Watson, Republican floor leader; Senator George H. Moses, president pro tem, and Senator Arthur Vandenberg, leader of the Republican "young guard."

These Hoover leaders offered one ray of hope to the administration by declaring they favored postponing all action on the protocol until December, 1931. They believe the postponement would provide time, too, for settling all legislative and political differences between the President and his Sentae leaders. They fear the effects on the country of continued conflict between the White House and Senate at a time when the nation is undergoing an economic crisis.

the holdup was in progress. He said:

"I went into the bank to get a $20 bill changed. Someone grabbed me and said:

"'Get back there to that vault.'"

"I went back with the rest and we all stayed inside while a bandit with rubber gloves seized the money and placed it in the suitcase."

"The robbers didn't try to lock the vault, which is about 8 by 12 feet. We stayed inside only a few minutes. When we came out the robbers were gone."

SEES BANDITS RUN

William Arthur, of 2108 Perrysville avenue, who work with Jesteadt selling produce, was sitting in his truck when the bandits ran from the bank. He said he saw three dash out at one time and enter the bandit car.

Two others were reported later to have left the scene in a taxicab. One report was that the robbers drove up to the bank in a taxicab.

TROOPS, REBELS CLASH IN SPAIN

movement, but virtually all telephone and telegraph communication with that area was cut off.

COMMUNICATION CUT

Communication with northern Spain was a virtual impossibility today, and it was difficult to get a clear picture of yesterday's events, but it appeared that the garrison at Jaca revolted and captured most of the town and fortress, driving a few loyal troops and the mayor of the little city into a retreat where they still hold out.

Then, loading themselves into buses and trucks, they started out for Huesca. Civil guards fired upon them as they traveled the mountain roads toward the provincial capital and five guards were killed. Rebel losses were not known. Enroute they met Gen. Las Heras, governor of Huesca, who had set out for Jaca, and captured him. He received two wounds in the clash.

PREPARE FOR BATTLE

Approaching Huesca they found preparations under way to halt their advance, so they stopped at Ayerbe and fortified that place in order to hold it against approaching loyal columns, led by Gens Polla and Gay. In a skirmish during the late afternoon there were a number of casualties among them a major of carabineros and a lieutenant of civil guards. At Ayerbe the rebels hurriedly threw up earthworks and sent scouts out to reconnoiter.

At Madrid the cabinet sat most of the night.

Gen. Berenguer announced that he would deal drastically to put down the movement and that all those implicated upon capture will be subject to summary court martial. He blamed syndicalist agitators, who have led Spanish laboring classes in a series of general strikes, which have left hardly a single Spanish city untouched during the past few weeks, for the uprising.

HEALTH SEALS AID SCIENCE

Part of the money raised by the sale of Christmas health seals is spent to co-ordinate or bring together a corps of research workers connected with outstanding universities and laboratories. Each of these men is specially trained in exploring a small fraction of the complex problem of tuberculosis.

Gradually the information thus obtained is turned over to the thousands of workers in the field for practical application. Thus the fight against tuberculosis continues every day in the year — unspectacular and undramatic, but nevertheless consistent and aggressive.

The nation-wide sale of Christmas seals has helped build sanatoria throughout the country. It has created tuberculosis, clinics and enabled public nurses to give instructions and care to patients in their homes. Extension of the fight against tuberculosis here and elsewhere depends greatly on the success of the Christmas seal sale.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Dec. 13.—Hungry, tired, nearly out of gas and with only 30 cents in their pockets, four Erie boys were found shivering in a stolen car parked near the woods at Van, on the Lakes-to-Sea highway. They had two shotguns, a rifle and fishing tackle. Admittedly they were "out to see the world" and "camp along the way."

But the pangs of hunger and a depleted gasoline supply were too much. They were brought here by Officer C. E. Lundgren, of the state motor patrol, fed and held for Erie authorities.

The boys were Robert Mangold, 14, the driver, and Charles Nuber, 13; Howard Nuber, 11, and Edward Nuber, 14, brothers.

WALLACE QUITS WESTMINSTER PRESIDENCY

Committee Selected to Seek Successor; Presbyterian Veteran's Work Praised

Dr. W. Charles Wallace, for 14 years president of Westminster College, has resigned his post, effective next June.

The resignation was accepted by the board of trustees of the college at a meeting in the Board of Publications Building yesterday.

Dr. H. H. Donaldson, president of the board, announced no successor had been appointed, although a committee was selected to seek a successor. Dr. Wallace did not attend the meeting.

Dr. Wallace has not been in the best of health for the last several months, according to his friends. He was quoted as saying his resignation was prompted by a desire to escape from the burdens of executive office. He is said to be the oldest college president in the state in point of service. He also was reported as unwilling to undertake raising a $500,000 endowment fund proposed by the trustees.

A resolution of appreciation for the untiring efforts and extensive expansion program accomplished during Dr. Wallace's term was passed by the board.

Dr. Wallace was graduated from Geneva College in 1899 with a bachelor of arts degree; from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary in 1904, and received his doctor of divinity degree from Geneva, Muskingum and Sterling colleges in 1916.

He was pastor of the Sheraden United Presbyterian Church from 1907 to 1912, of the First Church in Braddock from 1912 to 1916, thence going to Westminster.

FAMED MEXICAN SHRINE DRAWS THOUSANDS

Hosts of Devout Pilgrims Honor 399th Anniversary Of Guadalupe Miracle

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Tens of thousands of pious Mexicans streamed along the roads to the suburban village of Guadalupe yesterday to pay homage in a one-year celebration to Nuestra Senora De La Guadalupe. It was the three hundred and ninty-ninth anniversary of her supposed miraculous appearance on the site of Guadalupe Cathedral, the most revered spot in Mexico. Faithful Mexican worshippers attribute to her all the good that has come to their country since.

Mass, which began at midnight, continued uninterrupted throughout the day, while long lines of policemen maintained order and kept the cathedral from being overcrowded.

It was a festive day for thousands of Indians, who have come from all parts of Mexico. Some pilgrims came by airplane, others by railroad, on burros and afoot, while others crawled on their knees.

At the Virgin Guadalupe's shrine in the cathedral is a cloth within a thick glass case. It is believed to be the mantle the Virgin gave to Juan Diego, a lowly Indian, on this spot nearly four centuries ago, with instructions to the Indian to carry it to his bishop as a symbol of her desire that a shrine be erected there.

Because education is a tribal affair among the Mexican Indians, it is difficult, Miss Louisa W. Knox, first vice president of the College Club, told the members yesterday in giving her impressions of that country. Little attempt has been made to educate the 7,000,000 Indians, and 18,000 elementary schools are needed, she said.

Girl Flees Dentist Via Window Route

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—(AP.) — "Now this is going to—" began the dentist as he turned toward Hazel Martin, 15, with a shiny instrument in his hand, but by the time he got to the middle of his sentence Hazel was well on her way.

Like a flash, he reported, she had jerked up a window and jumped to the ground, a short distance below. Hazel was one of a group of children brought to Chicago for dental treatment from a charitable home in Evanston. She is still missing.

THE FRILL FEATURED AS AN EXPRESSION OF FEMININITY

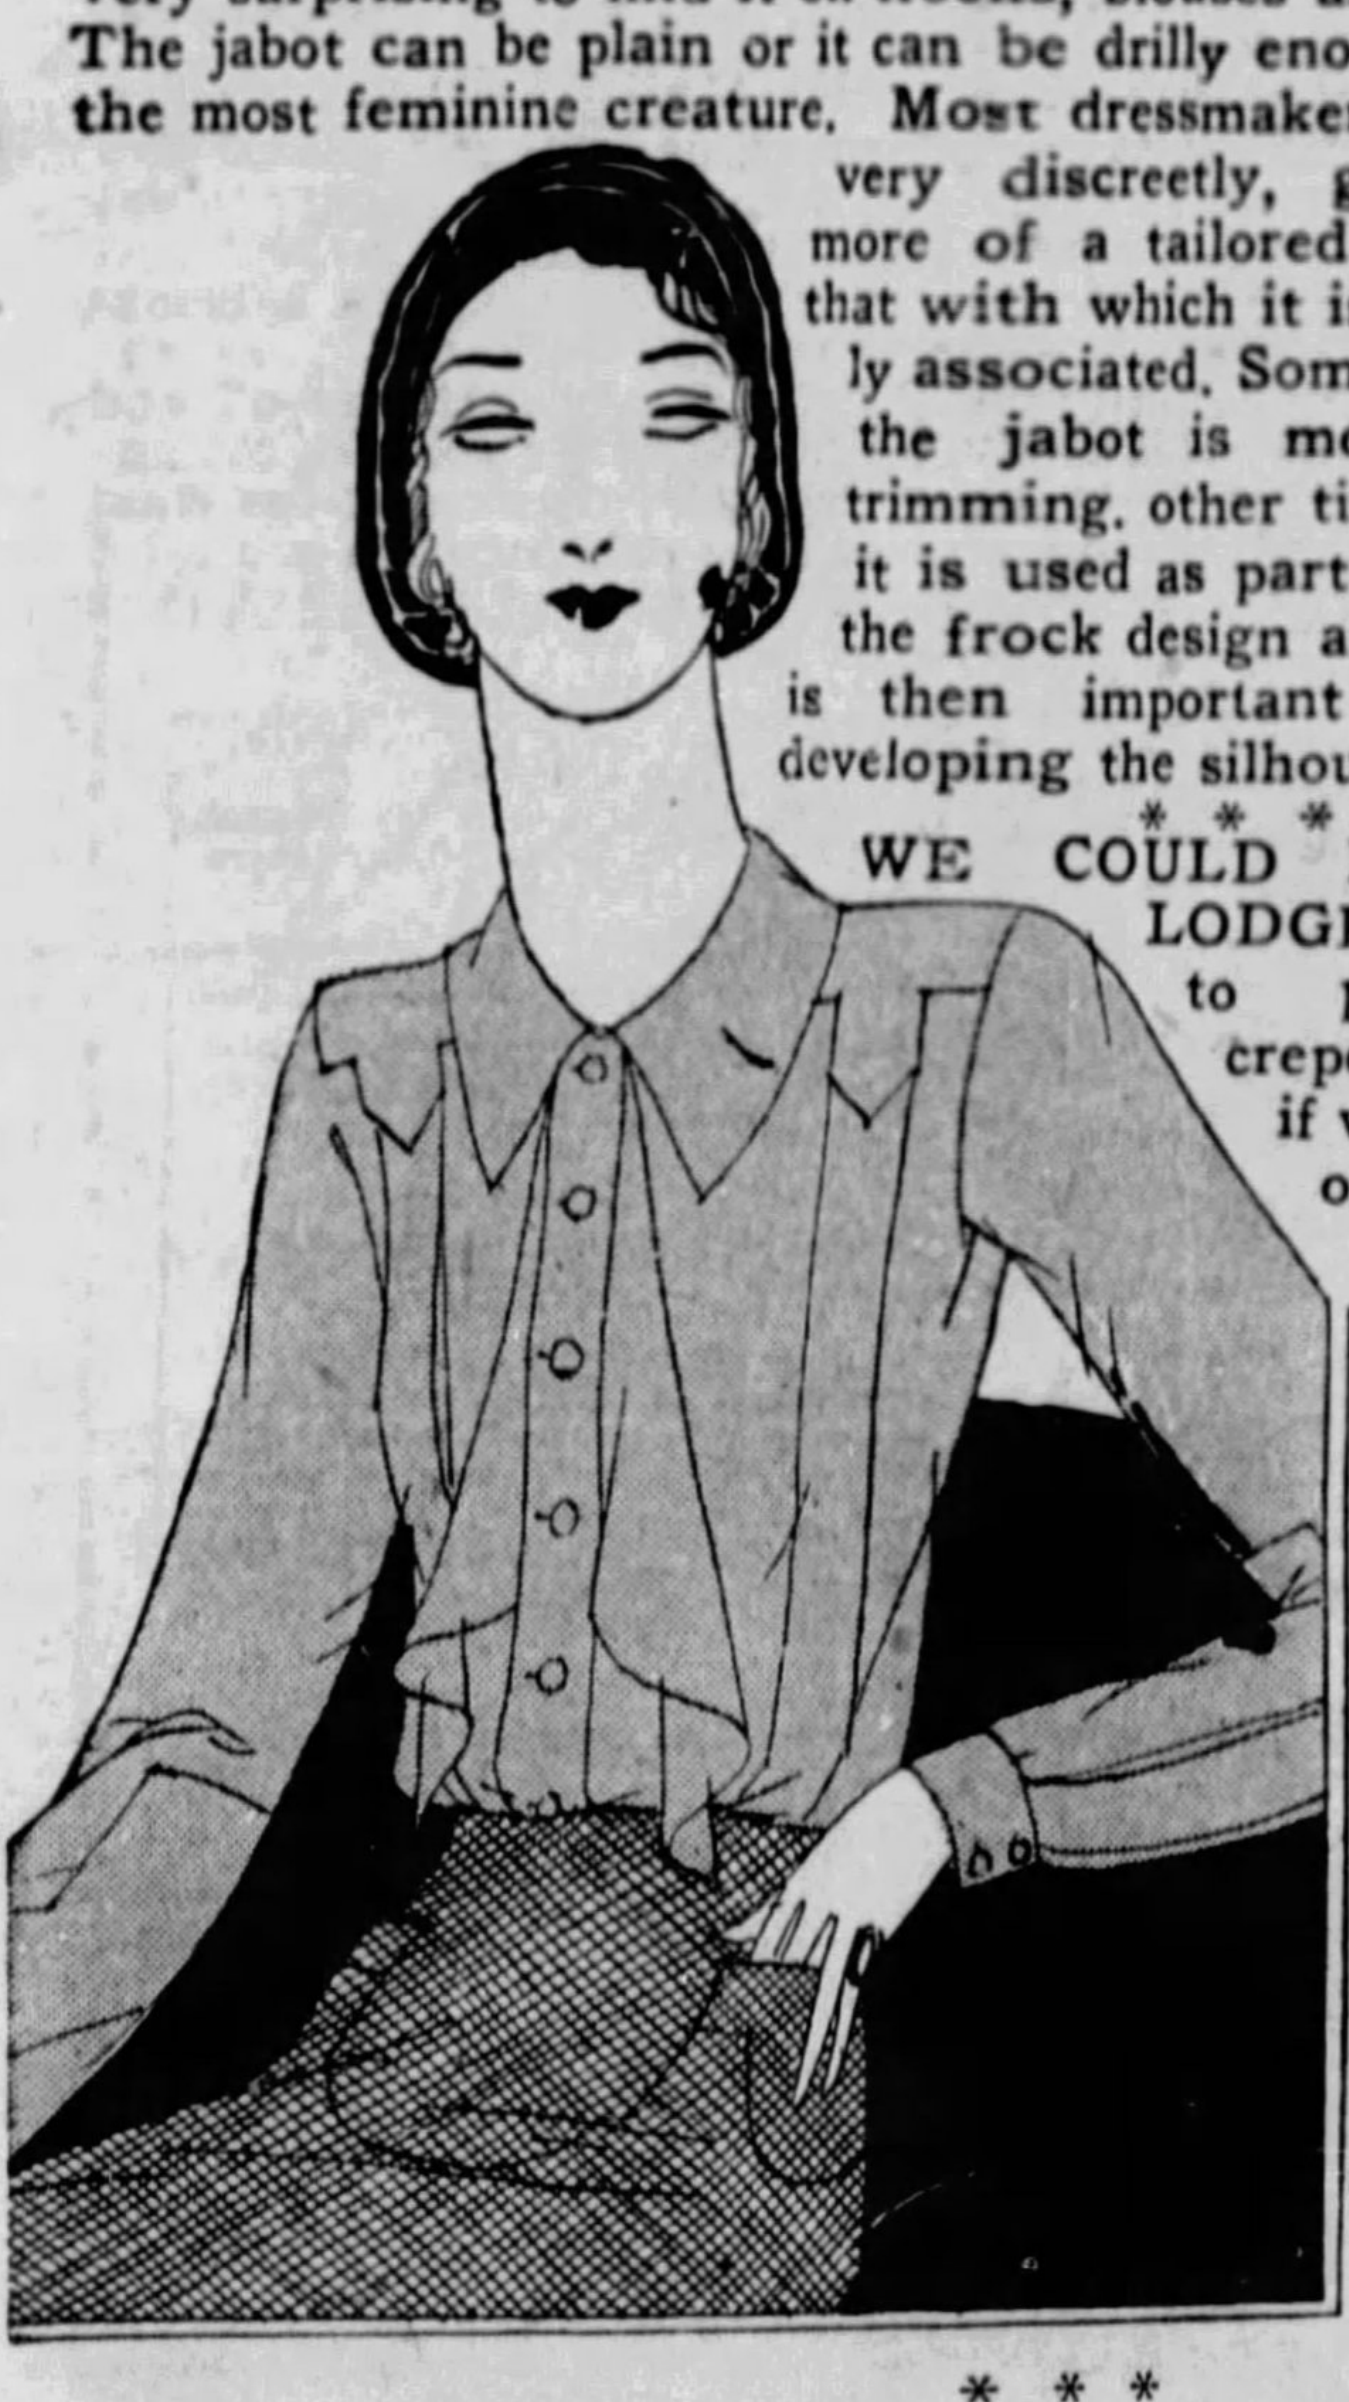
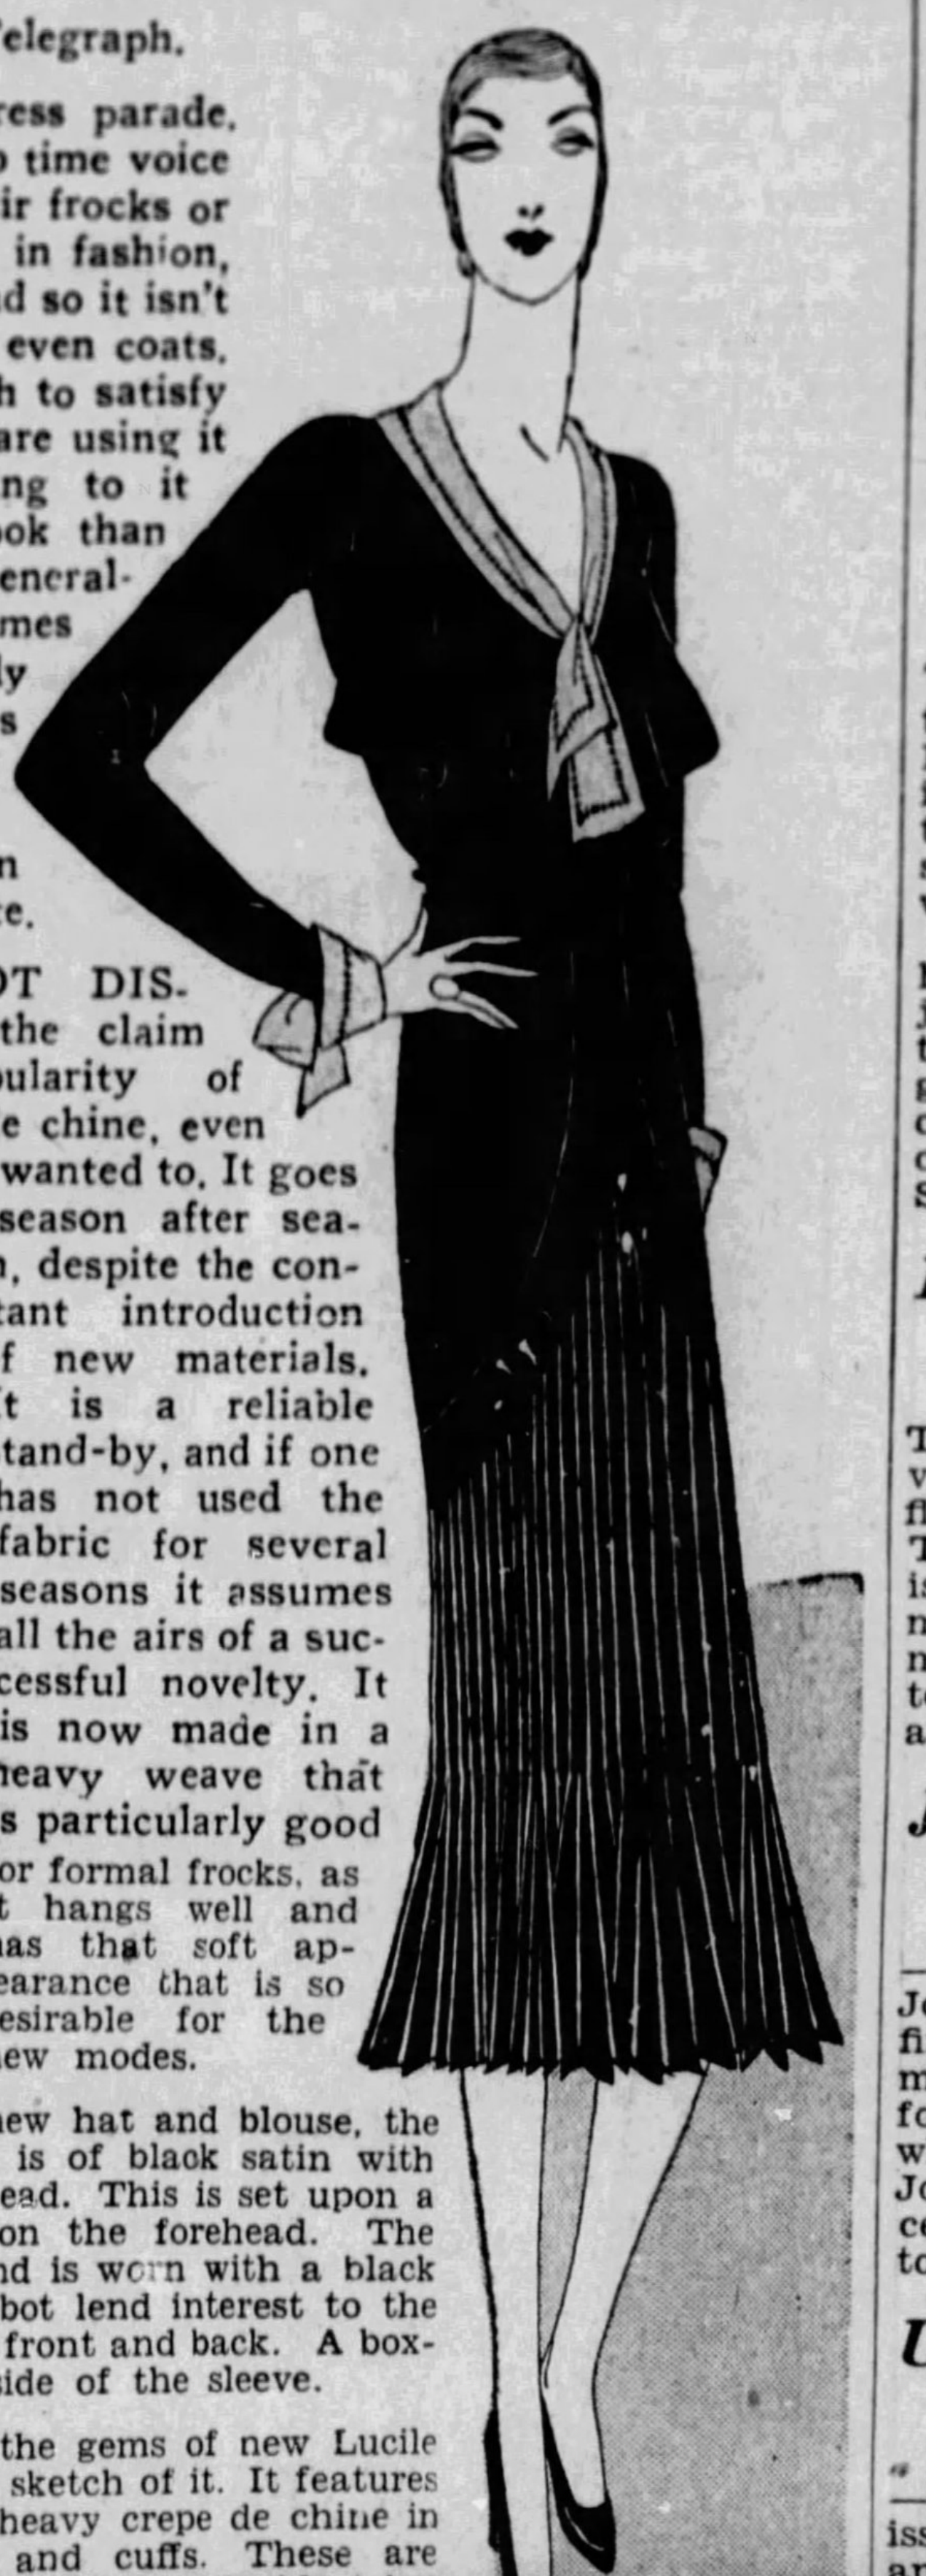
Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.





PARIS, Dec. 13.—The jabot joins the dress parade. There are ever so many women who from time to time voice suppressed longings for a nice frilly jabot on their frocks or blouses. Well, with the reversion to femininity in fashion, the jabot was bound to come into light of day, and so it isn't very surprising to find it on frocks, blouses and even coats. The jabot can be plain or it can be drilly enough to satisfy the most feminine creature. Most dressmakers are using it very discreetly, giving to it more of a tailored look than that with which it is generally associated. Sometimes the jabot is merely trimming, other times it is used as part of the frock design and is then important in developing the silhouette.

WE COULD NOT DISLODGE the claim to popularity of crepe de chine, even if we wanted to. It goes on season after season, despite the constant introduction of new materials. It is a reliable stand-by, and if one has not used the fabric for several seasons it assumes all the airs of a successful novelty. It is now made in a heavy weave that is particularly good for formal frocks, as it hangs well and has that soft appearance that is so desirable for the new modes.

THE SKETCH of the seated figure shows a new hat and blouse, the former by Agnes, the latter by Jean Patou. The hat is of black satin with a rolled band crossing vertically over the top of the head. This is set upon a close-fitting cap-like piece of black satin worn high on the forehead. The blouse by Patou is of pinkish-beige crepe de chine and is worn with a black tailored suit. The box-pleat and the novel double jabot lend interest to the front of the blouse. There is a shoulder yoke at both front and back. A box-pleat runs from the elbow down the cuff on the outside of the sleeve.

THE DRESS known as "Rendez-vous" is one of the gems of new Lucile collection and so we are glad to be able to send you a sketch of it. It features the jabot in a novel manner. The material is a very heavy crepe de chine in black with a color note in the pale pink georgette tie and cuffs. These are trimmed with a single row of double hemstitching. The circular, double jabot on the bodice is cut in one piece with the sloping applied band on the skirt. The flounce, shallower in back than in front, is pleated in a double type of fold—straight loose pleats at the top and flaring sun-ray pleats lower down.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Does It Matter If Girl Is Older Than Her Beau?

"Can't get away to marry you today—

"My mamma won't let me!"

That's Bink's torch song—and it certainly burns Curlie up.

But does she tell him to take himself and his song back to mamma's loving arms? No, my dear, she does not. She just sits down and waits for another wallop. Maybe you're like that yourself. If so, listen in—this is good for what ails you.

"Dear Sally:

"I am bringing my breaking heart to you for help, as I surely don't know what to do. I've tried and tried to figure it out for myself, but I simply can't do it.

Difference in Age

"Bink, my boy friend, is two years younger than I am, and it's just breaking me all up. At first he didn't seem to mind about my age, but then his mother began messing everything up for us by talking about it, and now he is beginning to feel that we could never get along together.

"He is constantly telling me that this difference in our ages would ruin our marriage. Gee, Sally! Why didn't he think of that sooner! Now he has ruined my life by making me love him. I have given him my all—my whole heart and soul. And honest, when we did break up once, and he went for six months with another girl, no one can ever dream of the tortures that I went through.

"But it seemed that we couldn't stay apart, so finally he broke with her, and I took him back, as usual, because I sure do love him, and I know that we would be happy together because for him I could work all my life.

"And I know that I could never be happy with anyone else. If he ever married any one else, or I did, and we ever met again, which I know we would, I know that I would fall in love with him all over again, and maybe he would find out that he was all wrong, and that age doesn't mean anything.

Mother Interferes

"Now his mother is nice enough if I meet her, and so is his dad who doesn't seem to mind my being older than Bink. But she tells everyone about my age. Gosh! Why can't she leave us two alone? She married the man she wanted. Why can't she stop spoiling things for me?

"And why does Bink chase me this way, if he doesn't intend to marry me? We have talked it over so often, and I have told him to leave me alone. But he only answered, 'I would if you'd go to Siberia, or some place else where I'd never see you again.'

"Yes, then maybe he would leave me alone. Oh, Sally! What shall I do? Can you tell me? Can any one tell me? But please don't tell me to give him up. I can't do that. He is really mine, and has been for two years. And when my heart aches, he is my only medicine.

"We need each other so. Please tell us what to do. Do you think the difference in our ages would keep us from being happy? We are both waiting for your answer . . . or the answer of some one who knows. Thanks a lot.

"CURLIE."

Why is this bozo playing "Now you see me—now you don't" with you, honey?

Well, it looks to me as if he were doing it because he has a nice, convenient Rubber Spine. He hasn't the gumption to stand up and decide, yes or no, for himself.

Hitherto Mamma has done all his thinking for him because he's too lazy and cowardly to do it for himself. And he's continuing to let her. The "age" argument is, of course, just an alibi. The main fact is that Bink doesn't want to face life—he's afraid. And Mamma doesn't want to let him. She gets a wonderful bang out of managing him and his affairs, and she certainly isn't going to relinquish her racket without a struggle.

Needs Courage

If you had the spunk to fight her back, there isn't a doubt that you could grab Bink off. But what good would he be to you, after you got him? If a man can't manage his own life, what could he do for yours? Would there be any pride in possessing a man that you two had wrangled over, like a couple of old hens over a worm?

What'll you do? Brace up and act human. Stop blobbing about a love that's wrecking your self-respect. Stop suzzling around in self-pity. Snap out of it, and make that big blob of blubber do likewise. Put it up to him straight to either fish—or cut bait.

Hurt? I suppose it will. But it can't possibly hurt half as much as what's happening now. And perhaps if you have the nerve to do it—real joy will come to you some day, as it comes to all of us if we have the courage to seek it.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

A man wants to know if he can win back his divorced wife, who once loved him, after having been divorced by her. The trouble was a roomer came into their home and stole the wife's love and as he puts it "sapped her mentality." Now, after the divorce, the wife 'phoned him and blamed him, saying, "Why didn't you throw the roomer out?"

She's right. Why didn't he?

His answer is, "I threw him out once, and he came back."

Well, well, well! And why, in the name of all that's decent, didn't you throw him out again and give him a good old-fashioned thrashing? Your wife would have had more respect for you if you had. A man's home is his castle and any intruder can and should be tossed out on his head. If you wanted the money he turned in more than you wanted your wife's affections, she should have left you.

A Detroit man writes that he always agrees with me, or did until I wrote that you couldn't get a good wife by correspondence. He did. They are ideally happy. He goes on to tell how he knew her brother in the Army and knew other friends of hers. It was through them they began correspondence.

Well, that's an entirely different thing. You knew the girl's friends and her brother and that was being introduced by mutual friends! I was talking about strangers at long distance who don't know whether a man is a business man or a bum, a good man or a bad one—and about men who write and ask you to marry them because they live where there is a good climate. I said it was bosh. I still think so. Your's was an entirely different thing, can't you see it was?

California boy: That girl told you she didn't love you. Her kisses are "cold." She cried because she didn't want to hurt you. You must be wating for a whole brick house to fall upon your head.

Don't make the girl despise you by dumbly pursuing her when she is trying to avoid you. Her good disposition will change and she will begin to dislike you thoroughly. Let her alone—good and alone. If she seeks you after that you might have a chance. Getting in the way never helped romance.

A clever Illinois wife wrote me why she is happily married which I think is interesting. She says:

"I can make good biscuits, but my husband doesn't like mine—or anybody else's. We are almost always broke, so you see we can't argue about money. Not having a baby, we can't argue about it. He likes my folks, and so do I his—I love his mother. So we don't argue about that, and unlike one of your correspondents, I don't expect breakfast in bed (imagine a farmer's wife!) so we don't argue about that! In fact, we think marriage great.

"Sincerely."

Horoscopes

Sunday, December 14

Sunday's horoscope may be considered as quite unpropitious for all workaday interests, with adverse conditions and vital menace to all not relating to the purely personal and private avocations. It would be wise to devote the day to religious, cultural, domestic, social or affectional matters exclusively.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to encounter a year of unforeseen change, with disruptive and disintegrating influences undermining the good prospects. While the energies will be at high pitch and aggressive, yet there may be many onslaughts of adversity and affliction to be resisted by wise counsel and calm premeditation.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be nervous, changeable and, probably, reckless in its adventures and determination to overcome obstacles. It may require strict training and discipline as well as enligh[illegible]

Monday, December 15

Monday's astrological forecast accents the promise of promotion or preferment for those in the employment of others, and also holds augury for many favors and pleasures at the hands of friendship. While there may be a tendency to study, profound thought and introspection, yet there may also be a leaning to domestic, artistic, social and affectional activities. New projects will move slowly.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of honors, favors and preferments, if in employment; otherwise, the offices of friendship and pleasure will be dominant. Social, domestic and affectional matters engage the attention, although the mind may be seriously inclined and studious. Postpone all new ventures, beware of small treacheries.

A child born on this day may be serious minded and studious, and at the same time fond of pleasure and friendship.

Small-Town Girl Luckiest if She Gets Boy Bound to Be Famous—Fay King

THE LOCAL BOY WHO DOESN'T INTEREST YOU NOW MAY BECOME A NATIONAL FAVORITE.
IT DOESN'T TAKE LONG TO CHANGE A SMALL TOWN BOY INTO A BIG CITY FASHION-PLATE
"I JUST KNOW YOU'RE GOING TO BE FAMOUS!"
THE WIFE OF MANY A FAMOUS MAN FOUND HER HUSBAND IN THE SMALL HOME TOWN
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Girls who live in small towns often feel greatly handicapped. They sigh for the big cities, and long to be in the whirl of the famous and the gay.

They seem to forget that most of the famous men have come from small towns. That in most cases the wives who share their fame and glory were hometown girls, shrewd enough to appreciate their possibilities.

A word to the wise is sufficient. Being in a small town is a lucky break. Look the local boys over and grab one while he is young and ambitious, then you'll have him when he makes good in the big city.

Countless wives of successful authors and actors and big business men married them when small town boys.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Lillian Find It Difficult to Assuage Mary's Fear

Lillian voiced the question which I was asking mentally about Mary's anxiety concerning the date of her party.

"Why tomorrow night, instead of the next, Mary?" she asked gently.

My husband's lovely young niece turned suddenly tragic eyes upon me.

"Because," she said, "I'm so afraid something will happen to spoil it if it waits too long. I just feel as if Mr. Veritzen was like an old vampire bat with wings outstretched, just waiting to grab me. If he gets a chance to see Noel and talk to him before the party, there won't be a party. I'm sure of that."

Again my foreboding glance met Lillian's. The girl had brought out into the open the secret fear lurking in both our hearts. Philip Veritzen meant mischief to the romance between his son and the girl watching us with tragic eyes. We were convinced of that. But with suddenly steeled heart I was equally sure that he would not succeed in whatever he was planning, so long as I had strength to oppose him.

"We'll have the party tomorrow night, if it's humanly possible," I told her, "but even if we fail in that, nothing shall happen to spoil your party—that is, nothing Mr. Veritzen or any other human being can do. Sickness or accident, of course—those are beyond anyone's power to control."

"I'm not afraid of anything God will do," Mary said childishly. "He'll be good to me. But I am afraid of the devil, and that's what Mr. Veritzen is."

"I agree with you, this far, Mary," Lillian said kindly, "that he has the devil in him these days. Whether it can be exercised or not, we do not know. But we have hopes, for ordinarily his is a kindly nature, and a chivalric one. He's obsessed now, however, and all we can do is to figure out what he means to do, and then throw black cats across his path. And I'll add my promise to that. He shall not get in any of his deadly work before your party, nor afterward either, if your auntie and I can help it. And don't forget that your uncle and Mr. Underwood are also very much on the job."

Mary smiled faintly.

"I ought to be safe, with all of you dear people taking care of me," she said. "And I'll try not to be foolish any more. Don't pay any attention to what I said about having the party tomorrow night. That will mean so much work for both of you."

"Not a bit more than if it were twenty-four hours later," I assured her. "And now I'm going to put you to bed, so that you'll be fresh to entertain Noel tomorrow. He's coming in on that first train, and your uncle and you and I will meet him at the station. Then we'll smuggle him over here and keep him here until the party, whether it's twenty-four or forty-eight hours. His father's first glimpse of him will be at dinner tomorrow night, and Mr. Veritzen is too poised a person and prizes his own dignity too highly to risk any scene in public."

"Yes, I guess that's true," Mary said, but there was doubt in her voice, and Lillian suddenly rose and, crossing to us, put her hands on the girl's shoulders.

"You little idiot," she said roughly, but her voice was kind. "What do you want called out in your behalf, a regiment of cavalry or Scotland Yard in force. You've just been assured of the eternal watchfulness of four people who have had a great deal of experience in foiling schemes of all sorts, shapes and sizes. You are not very complimentary if you think we shall not be a match for Philip Veritzen, even if he has sold his soul to Beelzebub. Now I want you to stop worrying about this. We've taken over the job now. Will you go to bed—and to sleep, or shall we give you an opiate?"

Her voice was a challenge, and Mary lifted her head and squared her shoulders in unconscious answer to it.

"You don't need to give me anything," she said. "I'm so tired that, if I don't worry, I shall be asleep in five minutes, and I promise both you and Auntie Madge that I won't worry any more."

Lillian clapped her on the shoulder as if she were a boy.

"'At a girl!" she said heartily. "Night, night, Madge. Rout me out tomorrow morning, if I'm not already up. This is part of my party, too, you know."

When the door had closed after her, Mary flung herself impetuously on me.

"Oh, Auntie Madge!" she said, "I just love you to death, you're so good to me. And what a dear Mrs. Underwood is. I ought to be the best girl in the world with all of you so wonderful to me. I'm—I'm afraid, I'm going to—cry. I just can't help it. I'm so happy."

I tightened my arms around her.

"Go on and cry, dearest," I told her. "It will be the best possible thing for you." But she had barely taken me at my word before the telephone, shrilling close to us, brought her up erect, tense, listening.

"Probably some of Mr. Underwood's nonsense," I said, even as the operator said, "Mrs. Graham? Mr. Veritzen calling."

Household Hints

A teaspoonful of lemo[illegible]ce in a cupful of warm water removes stains from the nails and fingers preparatory to manicuring.

There is no garnish for the fish course so attractive as thin slices of lemon, dipped either in minced parsley or sprinkled with paprika.

Drying the wash on a rainy day is a problem, but if it is possible to hang a line in the cellar a great deal of space may be conserved by hanging dresses, underwear, nightgowns and similar articles on clothes hangers.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Ill-Advised Plan

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young couple are to be married at church. The wedding is to be formal. The bride-to-be has chosen her niece as her attendant. The groom-to-be has a married friend whom he has selected to be his best man. The young couple are very close friends of the best man and his wife. Please give me your opinion as to an invitation extended to the best man, requesting him to be the escort of the bridesmaid at a dinner for the "four" without including the best man's wife in the invitation?

CONSTANT READER.

While this plan of the choice of attendants is quite correct, it is not good form for the bride and groom to plan to give any entertainment before or after the wedding in which the wife of the best man is not included. It is not necessary for them to invite the wife of the best man to be of the wedding party, but it certainly would look strange, and be strange, if the "four" had dinner together, disregarding the best man's wife.

A Courteous Student

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a male student goes to visit an ex-teacher of his (the teacher being a lady) should he allow her to draw up a chair for him, or, as she goes to get the chair, should he say, "Allow me" or some such expression and draw up the chair himself?

We had quite a discussion about this in class and I'd appreciate it very much if you would advise us.

A STUDENT.

The guest should, as he sees that his host is about to bring a chair forward for him, at once volunteer to bring the chair.

A Letter to Be Ignored

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a man whom you have never met writes to you, are you supposed to answer the letter, saying you do not wish to carry on a correspondence with him—or ignore the letter?

This is a man old enough to be my father or my grandfather. He is a neighbor of relatives of mine, and I know from the way they have talked to me they have encouraged him into believing he might have "a chance" with me, and I can't be bothered.

What is one to do when solicitous friends try to start such correspondence?

K.

Under the circumstances, and since the man did not ask your permission to write to you, it is not necessary for you to answer this letter. I think that this would be a kinder way than to write him that you do not wish to have him write to you. He will, by your silence, get the point of your not wishing to have him write to you.

A Correct and Gracious Comment

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The young man I go about with and I were invited out for a drive with a friend of his. I had never met this young man, so when they left me at my home I thanked him, also saying that I was happy to have met him. My friend tells me that I should not have added that, it was improper. Will you please advise me if it was improper?

M. B.

Indeed, it was not improper to make this pleasant and appreciative comment, but quite correct and a gracious thing to do.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Naturally curly hair must not be subjected to the cold rinsing after the shampoo. It gets mad and won't curl. Steaming kinks it up in fine style.

There are two fads that men are doing some growling about—girl's hats set far back on the head and highly colored nail polishes. A third fobia with the so-called sterner sex is stocking seams that are twisted. Concerning his own woman, the modern man is about as conservative as his puritanical grandfather. What a roar he put up when the bob came in! And what a lot of good it did him, the silly old thing!

One beauty ritual which should not be overlooked is a brisk, five-minute friction of the scalp every night. Spread over the skull is a thin layer of fatty tissue, interlaced with blood streams from which the hair growth gets board and lodgings. As the years go by, scalp tissues are likely to tighten—the blood supply is crippled. Massage each day keeps thin hair away. Surface friction is wasted energy. The scalp must be moved about, loosened from its moorings. Place thumb and fingers outspread and go to it.

Fat shoulders can be toned down and slenderized by clasping the hands together and stretching them high. Bring them down with a strong flexing of the muscles of chest and upper arms.

Pretty daughters contribute a decorative element to the family circle—not that the mammas are not good to look at. Daughters should bestow upon those who love them their brightest radiance instead of casting it generously before those who are of no special importance, like the casual acquaintance. The companionship of youth keeps middle-age on its toes, in touch with the moving pageant of days. Middle age is grateful, or should be. So shine for the oldsters.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

When Croup Attacks in the Night

DR. COPELAND

One of the most painful experiences of childhood is the ailment formerly known as "membranous croup." We hear that name infrequently these days because now it is recognized as a mild form of diphtheria.

The symptoms of this condition are caused by an inflammation of the larynx, the windpipe, with the formation of a false membrane. It usually attacks the child between the ages of 2 and 5 years.

The attack may start as a cold does. There may be some fever, and general discomfort. It may come very suddenly in other cases.

In a sudden attack, which is apt to come at night, the child is awakened from sleep gasping for breath. The mucous membrane lining the throat is so swollen that scarcely any air can pass through. There is a sharp, barking cough, with what is usually described as a "metallic sound." The fever increases and the pulse is rapid.

The child appears to be desperately sick. It is natural that the mother should feel terrified. But heroic measures should be taken at once, so she must be as calm as possible. The first thing to do is to send for a doctor. While waiting his coming there are certain things to be done to give relief to the little sufferer.

Put the child in a hot bath at a temperature of about 100 degrees. Be careful not to have the water too hot, so as to scald the little patient. Try the heat of the water on your elbow to make sure it is safe for the child.

Keep the little patient in the bath for 15 or 20 minutes. At the same time compresses should be applied to the head.

In an older child a hot foot bath, to which a teaspoonful of mustard has been added may be adequate to draw the blood from the upper part of the body. When this takes place it gives relief to the sufferer.

Syrup of ipecac, or syrup of squills, is sometimes given to induce vomiting so that the mucus accumulation in the throat may be cleared away. But every such remedy, all drugs, indeed, should be given only when the family doctor prescribes.

The child is usually frightened at the extreme difficulty in breathing. He wants to be taken up and carried. Keep the child well wrapped and guarded against exposure if taken from bed.

It may be necessary to apply a treatment known as "intubation." In this a tube is inserted in the throat, enabling the child to breathe. Fortunately this procedure is rare these days. Antitoxin has saved the necessity of operation in thousands of cases.

The important thing to remember is to apply the immediate treatment I have outlined. This is likely to give relief to the sufferer.

Membranous croup is always a dangerous thing to handle. The larynx is in the narrowest part of the respiratory passage, so that a slight obstruction may prove serious.

I never think of this ailment, which used to be so common when I was a young doctor, without a feeling of extreme thankfulness that science has found a means of prevention. With the universal inoculation against diphtheria, membranous croup will disappear.

Answers to Health Queries

M. H. Q.—What causes pains in the legs?

D. J. T. Q.—Is there any cure for cancer of the stomach without an operation?

A.—No.

Good Reader. Q.—What causes a cracking in the arm?

2—Would omitting breakfast help one to reduce?

3—Are tomatoes, lean meats, potatoes or coffee particularly fattening?

A.—Probably due to a lack of synovial fluid around the joint. Massage and heat should give relief. Be sure there is no rheumatic tendency.

2—It may, but it would be wise to eat three meals daily, restricting the sweets and starches and keeping the system in proper working order.

3—Potatoes are fattening, but the other foods eaten or taken in moderation should not add to the weight.

In the Child's Room

If you want to teach your child orderliness right from the start, see that the closet poles, bookcases, etc., are placed low enough for the youngster to put his things away himself. A child-size tree pole is a handy thing to teach order, as the clothing may be taken off and hung up to air and dry out immediately, thus doing the child and the clothing both good.

ARMY-NAVY GAME ON AIR

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Save for two intersectional football games on the Coast during the holidays the gridiron season comes to a close today with the meeting of the Army and Navy at Yankee Stadium.

For this sports classic, the resumption of which can be attributed to New York sports writers, a radio precedent has been established. It represents the first time that listeners have been asked to contribute money for "tickets" to a broadcast. The tickets, calling for a contribution of one dollar to the fund for the unemployed, have had, reports say, an enormous sale in every section of the country.

The game is expected to have the most extensive radio hookup in the history of sports. More than 100 stations will carry a description of the contest. In addition, it will be transmitted by short wave to foreign shores, even to England for the future education of her listeners in the intricacies—so far unintelligible to them—of American football.

Smith's Football Best This Season

American football, I have an idea, would not be so difficult for the English to understand were the authoritative voice of Ernie Smith to describe it to them. The best football broadcast this season was that of the Notre Dame-Southern California game with Smith at the microphone for the Columbia system.

The armchairs of the metropolitan area are still singing his praises, commending his accuracy, his expert knowledge of football, his ability to convey the thrills and excitement of that surprising struggle.

Musical research, because of radio, has become a national pastime. Once confined to the dusty exclusiveness of public libraries, it has moved to the generous hospitality of the front parlor. More than 50,000 old tunes, which at one time or another, have been sawed out of the fiddles of the country, are now available to the broadcasters. Enough to satisfy every band in the republic. Enough to satisfy even the relic-hunting hobby of Henry Ford.

If the radio men become hard-pressed for funds with which to pay for the ringside embraces of the ponderous palookas they should be able to dispose of their old song collections to Ford for what Wall Street banks now call a pretty penny.

The broadcasters have lain their restless fingers on pieces bearing 1840 copyright dates. They have scoured for them in out-of-the-way places, in old music shops, on attic shelves and in musty trunks of countless musicians. And they have come up smiling with tunes that bear picturesque vintage. Many of them are campaign songs that did service when Hayes and Hancock were running for President.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Knute Rockne joins the invisible host today in describing the radio spectacle of the year—the Army-Navy game. What Knute misses in the general fanfare of bugles, bands, braided uniforms, snappy formations—the versatile Ted Husing will pickup for WJAS listeners starting at 12:15. With Knute extended the privilege of cutting in on the CBS picture when he pleases, we doubt that Ted will have much use for those classy field glasses we told you about when he was here for the Pitt game. Graham McNamee and Bill Munday will hold up the NBC end of the program with KDKA starting at 12:30 and WCAE at 1:15.

Rockne and Husing are bosom friends. The one man outside the South Bend camp who knows Notre Dame signals and plays each season is the Columbia whirlwind.

An analysis of the World Court from the viewpoint of a leading Democratic legislator will come to WCAE folk at 7:45, when Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, speaks over NBC.

What sort of a fellow is "Believe It or Not" Ripley? Lorna Fantin tells over WJAS at 9 tonight in her character reading period.

Bugs Baer, Sun-Telegraph columnist, performs as m. c. for Welcome Lewis and other artists in the 8:15 WCAE sketch.

STEEL OUTPUT FOR WEEK AT 38%

Total Ingot Production For 1930 Estimated At 40,000,000 Tons

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel production is now decreasing at less than the usual seasonal rate, losing about a point a week, with production this week at about 38 per cent. November, as shown by the official report, averaged a rate of 44.64 per cent, against 50.32 per cent for October and 55.10 per cent for September, and the last week of November probably ran about 40 per cent.

Assuming a 37½ per cent rate for this month the year's total steel ingot production, including electric and crucible, would be an even 40,000,000 tons.

Thus there has been sharply decreasing production and it would be merely out of respect for the calendar to compare the year's total of 40,000,000 tons with the 54,850,000 tons of last year and the 50,325,000 tons of the year before. Some observers have suggested that this year made a false start in a way, most in steel particularly, but in trade generally. A better view seems to be that the business recession, which really began at the middle of last year, simply continued, there being a descending spiral caused by decreased activity in one thing bringing about decreased activity in another, and so on all around.

Business recession has now extended over a period of 17 months and some observers take this as a very probable indication that it has gone as far as it can. There are other and more impressive reasons for hoping that the recession has now gone its full length. That, of course, proves nothing as to the pace of recovery or how much time would be occupied in getting back to normal or average. As to steel, as an individual industry, there is practically no room for doubt as to seasonal improvement occurring through the early months of the new year. That should occur even if general trade were slipping a little more, all precedents showing how strong is this seasonal influence in steel.

For the first time in almost a year and a half the finished steel markets are all practically steady. While there was not much decline in prices last year, irregularities crept into the nail market as early as June and other lines weakened later or actually declined. The heavy declines were in the first half of this year. There is now almost no shading in any direction. Bars, shapes and plates seem to be perfectly rigid.

BANK JOURNAL SEES UPTURN

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—This is the season when a slowing down of manufacturing activity customarily occurs to offset the expansion in retail trade and there is no evidence that business has slipped any lower in the cycle during the past month, but the balance, if any, is on the side of the favorable developments, says the current issue of the American Bankers Association Journal in its monthly discussion of the condition of business. The journal continues:

"Extreme pessimism today would be as unwarranted as extreme optimism was a year and one-half ago. Manufacturers and merchants, with the false upturn and subsequent reaction in business this spring still fresh in mind, will naturally move slowly in their commitments for merchandise or their expansion of plant facilities. The condition of the member banks in the Federal Reserve System has been steadily strengthened by the continued liquidation of secured loans."

BANK MEETING SCHEDULED

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—A bank management conference, the second to be sponsored in the Central Atlantic States by the American Bankers' Association in cooperation with the state bankers' associations, will be held in Washington, D. C., February 26 and 27, 1931, it is announced by Frank W. Simmonds, deputy manager of the association. The District of Columbia Bankers' Association will act as host. The conference district includes Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and District of Columbia.

Four sessions will occupy the two days and will give participating bankers an opportunity to engage in an intensive study and discussion of current bank management problems. Successful bankers, chosen because of their qualifications to present practical knowledge gained from first-hand experience in bank operation, will address the delegates. The application of the best banking practices and methods to the individual bank's requirements under conditions confronting them today will be treated from all points of view. The delegates will be given opportunity to engage in an interchange of ideas and experience regarding the different subjects discussed.

SEASONAL LULL IN GLASS TRADE

With the taking of inventory now under way at a number of distributing houses and soon to start at others, comparative seasonal quiet holds sway in the market for window, plate and other flat glass products, according to American Glass Review.

Demand for window glass is in somewhat smaller volume than in the latter half of November, and may be expected to continue along quiet lines the remainder of the month. In the manufacturing end all factors, as a consequence, are marking time, hopeful for a revival of activities after the turn of the year.

Jobbers' warehouse stocks, always depleted around inventory time, owing to the abnormal trade trends of the past fall, have receded to a new modern low level this year. Especially is this true of the more popular sizes. With the outlook for an early resumption of building activity continuing to improve, it would seem that the distributing trade must soon anticipate its need to some extent, at any rate, if disappointments are to be averted.

Factory operating schedules in the window glass branch, as for some weeks past, are on a decidedly curtailed basis, with production at the lowest seasonal average in some years. During the week just ended no changes of consequence were reported in operations.

Jewel Tea Sales Drop in November

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Sales of the Jewel Tea Company for the four weeks ended November 29 totaled $1,217,652, a decrease of 12.1 per cent, from $1,386,469 for the like month last year. Sales for the first 48 weeks this year aggregated $14,255,072, a decrease of 7.3 per cent from $15,384,805 for the corresponding period of 1929.

Union Switch Gets Big Signal Orders

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE UNION SWITCH AND SIGNAL COMPANY will do a greater volume of business in 1930 than in 1929. New orders and business in prospect indicate that 1931 will exceed the present year.

The Switch Company is owned by Westinghouse Air Brake. While the parent company has suffered from a lack of new business, the subsidiary has continued to expand its volume. This may be explained by the fact that new signal apparatus usually results in an immediate saving in operating costs to railroads while the purchase of new rolling stock, on which air brakes would be needed, does not save money for the carriers unless the volume of traffic originating on the line is heavy.

Union Switch and Signal has recently booked a large volume of new orders which will insure operations at a high rate for a large part of the coming year.

Cincinnati Terminal

THE CINCINNATI UNION TERMINAL COMPANY has awarded a contract to the Union Switch and Signal Company for the installation of a large electro-pneumatic interlocking plant at the new Union Station. This terminal is a $75,000,000 project, $40,000,000 of which will enter into the construction of the station, adjacent track and interlocking facilities.

The electro-pneumatic interlocking facilities will represent an expenditure of over $1,500,000. The entire interlocking facilities, comprising the layouts on both sides of the station, will be controlled and operated from one interlocking machine, which will be installed in a room especially constructed for that purpose in the station building itself.

The interlocking machine will have 231 levers, of which 42 will be spares, for the operation of 71 switches, 40 double slips with movable point frogs and 131 signals, as well as the establishment of traffic direction and check locking.

Illuminated Indicators

AN ILLUMINATED TRACK diagram, provided with two indication lights for all track sections and indication lights which will repeat the indications of signals, will afford complete information for the leverman as to train movements through the terminal area and also as to the position of switches and signals at any given instant.

This installation will serve the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio; Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis; Chesapeake and Ohio; Louisville and Nashville; Norfolk and Western and Southern railroads.

Gets Indianapolis Order

ALSO AS A PART of an extended program to improve the traffic facilities at the Indianapolis terminal the Indianapolis Union Railway has awarded a contract to the Union Switch and Signal Company for the installation of an electro-pneumatic interlocking plant which will handle all track facilities east of the station. This interlocking will be handled from one interlocking machine, which will control not only all switches and signals in the immediate vicinity of the station governing movements to and from the various station platform tracks, but will govern the approaches of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway to the terminal. These interlocking facilities represent an expenditure of $500,000.

The interlocking machine will have 111 levers, of which six will be spare, for the operation and control of 62 switches, seven double slips with movable point frogs, five independent sets of movable point frogs and 92 signals.

COUNTY ROAD UNIT WINS PRAISE

Fugassi Credited With Building Up Present Highway Organization

By JAMES B. SANSOM,
Secretary Allegheny County Planning Commission.

Up-to-date equipment and modern methods have brought the road maintenance division of Allegheny County to a point of efficiency such as has earned for it general commendation from highway authorities. Superintendent John A. Fugassi, who has built up this division to its present condition, has a valuable experience as head of the Highways and Sewers Bureau of the City of Pittsburgh, and his policies have been backed up by Director Norman F. Brown, of the Department of Public Works, and Allegheny County's progressive Board of County Commissioners has provided modern equipment and a fine organization to carry on the work.

John F. O'Toole, formerly superintendent of highways and sewers, who gained in that position an intimate knowledge of the preparation and laying of asphalt, has charge of the five asphalt plants located at strategic points in the county. These county-owned and operated plants provided by the County Commissioners have saved thousands of dollars annually to the county in cost of asphalt and asphaltic concrete and their locations have resulted in further economies because of reduced hauling cost.

SETS UP RECORD

The total tonnage for base and surface turned out by the asphalt division for the past 11 months of 1930 has been 125,775 tons and has enabled the division to rebuild and resurface 49.81 miles of county roads, and this in many cases has included widenings and curve straightenings all along the routes. With a new spreader in service, that has tripled its efficiency in this work, the division has given surface treatment to and seal-coated 102.60 miles of road, a record achievement in this line of work.

The organization that has made this possible includes, besides the asphalt division, six road maintenance districts each with a superintendent and its own headquarters and equipment. They are the material and transportation section, sign and safety section, landscape section, traffic ordinance section and Liberty Tunnel roadway section.

Real Estate

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang will be the speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board next Tuesday in the William Penn Hotel. His subject will be "River and Rail Terminals and River Front Improvement."

The first home in Cedarhurst Manor, new residential park, in Bower Hill road, Mt. Lebanon, has been completed by Caste Brothers, builders, and is open for inspection. The same builders have purchased seven plots in the development and are now completing six more homes of English design. Two plots also have been secured by Oliver Enscoe, who is erecting a home. Dr. George Gould and L. E. Kimmerling are also building homes in Cedarhurst Manor.

Robert W. Semenow, director of the Pennsylvania real estate brokers' license law, is sponsoring a proposed amendment to the present license law which, if acted upon favorably, will compel those applying for a real estate license to pass an examination embodying the principals of English, civics and mathematics. Semenow believes that such a test will bar undesirables and protect buyers. Pennsylvania, he points out, is one of the few states that has no such educational test.

SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY ACTIVE

Merchant Marine Strength Necessary to Security Of Nation, Chapman Says

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.
(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Helped by government subsidies, the shipbuilding industry in the United States has waxed especially active in this red ink year.

Mr. Rukeyser

As head of a company which this week laid the keel for the first two large new trans-Atlantic steamers, P. W. Chapman, president of the United States Lines, Inc., is a symbol of a new motive force which is creating an American merchant marine. Asked to indicate why, in the face of a discouraging American experience in the past with a merchant marine, he has selected that field for business venturesomeness, Mr. Chapman replied:

"Our purpose regarding the American Merchant Marine is its establishment on a permanent basis. To that end we dedicate whatever in effort and affluence we may possess—regardless of foreign or domestic efforts to defeat it.

OWN CARRIERS BEST

"We believe foreign domination of carriers at sea is not to the best interests of our agriculture and industry—it could be destructive of our markets—our balance of trade—our prosperity.

"We believe our commerce must be independent and our merchandise mobile, under our own flag, throughout the seven seas.

"We believe merchant marine strength is, in time of peace or war, as necessary to the future security of the United States of America as navies and armies.

"We believe the stars and stripes are of inestimable value in the promotion of peace and trade relations wherever unfurled—on land or on sea."

In these nay-saying days of short-term pessimism, Mr. Chapman's yea-saying, creative mood is refreshing, even though it may be reminiscent of the economic imperialism of which Rudyard Kipling used to be the meistersinger.

MONEY TRUST

Is there a "money trust" in New York? Congress got all excited over this question about 17 years ago, and started the so-called money trust investigation.

Although there is no technical "money trust," the Bank of the United States incident disclosed unmistakably that there is among the great New York banks a consciousness of a community of interest.

Despite the fact that the institution, taken over by the state superintendent of banking, was not a member of the New York Clearing House Association. The 23 banking members of the association agreed to advance cash at 5 per cent interest up to 50 per cent of the value of deposits in the institution affected, thus relieving business men and other depositors of embarrassment which might come from inability to get cash.

Fortunately at this time of readjustment, there is not anarchy, but intelligent co-operation and co-ordination among the New York banks.

Insurance Deficit Faced by Germany

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Despite a renewed increase in unemployment-insurance premiums as of October 6, 1930, from 5½ to 6½ per cent, the German government today faces again a deficit of 300,000,000 reichsmarks for which no cover is as yet available, according to a report from the American consulate general at Berlin, made public by the Department of Commerce. The number of unemployed during the quarter ended September 30, 1930, increased from 2,600,000 to 3,030,000, against corresponding figures of 1,300,000 and 1,400,000 for the 1929 quarter. The steadily increasing cost of unemployment benefits has upset government estimates of expenditures, the report states.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

LIFE INSURANCE INVESTMENTS INCREASE

Crocker Optimistic on U. S. Farm Industry; Loans to Show Gain

NEW YORK, Dec 13.—Notwithstanding a year of nation-wide depression, the investments of United States life insurance companies will be increased by $1,418,000,000, according to an original survey presented to the second morning session of the annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents here today. In submitting these figures, Walton L. Crocker, of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, said that the investments at the close of this year will be double those held seven years ago. The farm mortgage situation received major consideration by Mr. Crocker, who sounded an optimistic note as to the outcome of the fundamental activity of agriculture in the United States.

The above totals which Mr. Crocker submitted were for all life insurance companies in the United States. Analysing the different classes of investments, Mr. Crocker then presented the experience of 52 leading companies representing 91.8 per cent of the total assets of all United States life insurance companies.

Stating that the leading investment medium of life insurance companies is the real estate mortgage, he pointed out that this form of investment comprises 40.3 per cent of the company assets. Mortgages on city property amount to $5,108,000,000 and those on farms to $1,886,000,000, a total of $6,994,000,000. These mortgages are secured by property in every state in the Union. The present year will show an increase in mortgage loans of 3.7 per cent as contrasted with a 7.9 per cent increase in 1929. The rate of progress in the city mortgage business is slowing, and there are definite conditions of overbuilding in certain communities, he stated.

Second in investment importance are bonds and stocks, aggregating $6,531,000,000, representing 37.6 per cent of the investment portfolio, according to Mr. Crocker. The common stock holdings of the life insurance companies will represent only slightly in excess of one-half of 1 per cent of the total assets. The companies hold railroad securities representing practically 22 per cent of the entire funded debt of all United States railroads. The volume of railroad securities purchased in 1930 will be slightly under the purchases of 1929, although in the first nine months of the year the offerings of new railroad securities were 78 per cent more than in the same period of 1929.

MINING BOOM AIDS JOBLESS

MONONGAHELA, Pa., Dec. 13.—Increased employment at some mines in the tri-county area is expected as a result of greater seasonal demands for coal by domestic users. However, many of the larger mines in the district are but little affected by domestic requirements due to the entire output being used by steel mills owned by the organizations owning the mines.

In Fayette County employment was given about 150 workers when operations were resumed at the Thompson No. 2 mine of the Thompson-Connellsville Coke Company, a subsidiary of the Hillman interests.

Unemployment among miners in Washington County will be decreased with the opening of the Enterprise mine of the Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal Company, located near the county seat. Approximately 200 men will be employed.

Part-time schedules are being maintained at the mines of the Bethlehem Mines Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, along the Monongahela and Marianna branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

At this time of the year many wagon mines which supply coal primarily for local and near local domestic use are placed in operation after being idle during the summer months. The total number of mines engaged in operating these small mines is considerable at this time and as a consequence the wagon mines aid in thinning the ranks of the unemployed.

American Machine Plans Voting Trust

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—American Machine and Metals Company, formerly Manhattan Electrical Supply Company, has asked shareholders to deposit their stock under a five-year voting trust agreement to assure continuance of the present management. Four New York Stock Exchange firms are supporting the plan.

Union Trust Names Assistant Manager

Announcement is made by the Union Trust Company of the appointment of Louis R Schmertz Jr., as assistant manager of the bond department under Charles H. Matthews, Jr., manager. Appointment is effective January 15.

Forbes

Laker's Rise; Storey's View; Buy Utilities

By B. C. FORBES

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—How is this for a business achievement?

"WE DID $30,000,000 BUSINESS IN 1928, $40,000,000 IN 1929 AND $50,000,000 THIS YEAR."

That is the phenomenal record of Lord & Thomas and Logan, advertising agency, whose directing genius is Albert D. Lasker, who, starting with the firm 33 years ago at $10 a week, is now the wealthiest advertising man in the world.

Mr. Forbes

Imagine being able to roll up an increase in billings and collections of 25 per cent in this depression year!

How did Mr. Lasker do it?

After correcting me by saying that HE didn't do it, but that his clients and associates rather than he did it, he explained:

"We choose to work only for smart people, people who would be successful without us. All our clients have actually done a larger VOLUME of business this year than last year—although, of course, the dollar total in a few cases has been less because of the decline in prices.

"Unless a client has in his business the potentialities of growth, the elements of success, we are not interested in handling his advertising. Unless our clients grow and prosper we wouldn't be able to grow and prosper. So we are careful to pick only such concerns as have in them leadership prospects and qualities.

"Our clients, as a rule, spend more money in poor times than in boom times, because they can make more headway over competitors. That is exactly what has been happening this year."

I have known "A. D." for 20 years and my analysis of him is that he has a mentality not surpassed by half-a-dozen men in any line of business in this country. His unique success is no accident.

TALKING OF ABLE men, there aren't many railway executives in the class of W. B. Storey, president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe System. From him I have obtained this straightforward, unvarnished analysis:

"The territory served by the Santa Fe has experienced the same vicissitudes that have befallen our country generally this year. The drought in the summer curtailed its crops, but much less than in territory further East. Wheat was made before the drought and turned out well, cotton fair, corn from 25 per cent to 50 per cent off, and other crops fair; but with the low prices the monetary return has been greatly reduced. Only citrus fruits brought good prices and with rather small crops produced an excellent return. Oil, mining, lumber, building, manufacturing, and industry generally have been depressed, and our traffic has suffered accordingly. Roughly it has run about 13.5 per cent behind last year, which, it should be remembered, was the greatest in our history, but only 6 per cent behind 1928.

"In looking forward we find that winter wheat has had favorable conditions up to the present time and citrus fruit gives promise of a much heavier crop than this past year. It should be remembered, however, that it is still to early to make any definite forecast as to either of these crops.

"COMMODITY PRICES SEEM FAIRLY WELL STABILIZED AND ANY STRENGTHENING OF THEM WILL BE A FAVORABLE SIGN.

"The Santa Fe is engaged in building 350 miles of new lines in Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico, on which we shall do some $5,000,000 of work this coming year. We have ordered over $6,000,000 of new equipment, our addition and betterment program will be about normal, requiring from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 of expenditures, and our maintenance of way and structures and of equipment will be about normal.

"We feel that the coming year will bring improved business conditions, but that the recovery will be slow. We hope, however, that a year from now we can all record substantial improvement and a bright outlook."

Martin J. Insull, the president, among other utility corporations, of Middle West Utilities, tells me that there has been an extraordinary increase in the number of investors in small lots of that company's stock. Also, that other Insull Utility Companies report a similar development.

Apparently many famlies of moderate means have growing confidence in their local utility concerns and are not at all disturbed over the attitude of certain politicians in a few parts of the country.

Jersey Standard Plans Large Tire System

NEW YORK, Dec. 13. — A chain system of tire merchandising greater than any at present in existence and probably surpassing in number of outlets any chain store system in the country, appears to be in the making centering around the Atlas Supply Company, Inc., formed a few months ago by Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Standard Oil Company of Ohio shortly will begin the sale of tires at service stations, following the lead of New Jersey Standard and Indiana.

It is estimated that total distributors will run between 90,000 and 100,000. Standard Oil of California and Standard of Kentucky will join the chain later.

MONEY MARKET FIRMS UP

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—After holding stationary at 2 per cent for 73 consecutive days, call money at the stock exchange loan desk was advanced to 2½ per cent yesterday after loans were renewed at 2 per cent.

This is the first change since September 29, when the rate dropped to 1½ per cent for renewals for the first time in 15 years. Call money had not exceeded 2 per cent since September 16, when it was 2½.

Although money had held officially at 2 per cent for more than two months, establishing a record unequaled in Wall Street annals, the rate has been regarded as somewhat artificial, since loans have been made in the outside market as low as 1 per cent.

Firmer money at this time of year is a seasonal development, and in addition, banks have withdrawn funds to strengthen cash positions. Speculative demand for call money has been light.

TWO BANKS JOIN IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The Union Trust Company of Maryland today was to take over, with the approval of the Baltimore Clearing House, the management and guarantee of the American Trust Company.

The American Trust Company, formed in 1926, has deposits of approximately $1,200,000. Its capitalization is $500,000, with a surplus of $100,000 and undivided profits of $26,000.

Union Trust officials said there had been no run on the bank or an exceptionally large number of withdrawals. The American Trust is being taken over with the full consent of the board of directors, he said.

Officers of the American Trust said there would be no restrictions on withdrawals or deposits.

Car Loadings Drop For Week in Canada

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Car loadings in Canada for the week ending December 6 totaled 54,571, a drop of 823 cars from the previous week. In the corresponding week last year the total was 59,521.

LIFE INSURANCE SOLVES TAX PROBLEM

Policies Made Payable To Named Beneficiary Not Taxable in State

Life insurance offers the best means of solving the inheritance tax problem, Joseph N. Mackrell, Allegheny County register of wills, told the Pittsburgh Life Underwriters Association at its large December meeting, and recommended it strongly.

Mr. Mackrell stated that inheritance taxes can cut deeply into an estate. Recently an estate with cash assets of only $600,000 was compelled to pay an inheritance tax of $1,200,000. This made it necessary to dispose of general property at a low market. If these assets could have been held they would at least have trebled their value in a short time.

The heirs could have been saved from making this costly sacrifice if sufficient insurance had been carried to meet the taxes. He stated that insurance made payable to a named beneficiary is not taxable in Pennsylvania, although insurance payable to an estate would be subject to tax.

Robert N. Waddell, Carnegie Tech football coach and vice president of the association, nominated Holgar J. Johnson, president of the association, as chairman of the general committee on the National Convention of Life Underwriters, which will come to Pittsburgh in September, 1931.

Holgar Johnson is one of the most colorful figures in the life insurance business in this country. He went into the business with Lee D. Hemingway, general agent of the Connecticut Mutual in Pittsburgh. From there he went to the home office of the Connecticut Mutual and, after a few years, came back to Pittsburgh as general agent of the Penn Mutual. He is a great believer in the group movement in life insurance and has been active in the association work throughout his entire life insurance history.

Capital Increase O. K.'d by Holders

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Stockholders of Addressograph International Corporation have approved the increase of capital stock to 1,000,000 shares from 750,000 and adopted the resolution approving the action of directors in consolidating with American Multigraph Corporation.

The company declared a cash dividend of 35 cents for the last quarter of 1930, placing the new stock on a $1.40 annual basis. The dividend will apply to all stock to be issued in connection with the merger. A special stock dividend of 15 3-10 per cent, payable to Addressograph International Corporation stockholders of record December 22, has also been declared.

More Tickletoes Arrive For Last Minute Rush

Dear Little Girls:

My worries are almost over. Another big shipment of loveable "Tickletoes" dolls came in from the doll makers yesterday and it looks as though I am well supplied for the tremendously big demand that is going to come between now and Christmas.

My only real worry is about the little girls who are delaying their efforts—those little girls who will come in on the last minute rush and want their "Tickletoes" before Christmas.

So I am urging every little girl who has had a letter from me to get busy right away, to finish the little task I have asked of them and come in and get their "Tickletoes" before the end of next week.

The three or four days just preceding Christmas are going to bring such throngs of little girls into my headquarters that it will take an extra force of Sun-Telegraph Doll Ladies to take care of them. So, little girls, take my advice. Get your "Tickletoes" before the last-minute Christmas rush if you want her before Christmas.

I can't possibly print the names of all the little girls who write to me, but I know that they like to see their names in the Sun-Telegraph and so every day I am printing as many as space will permit. Here are the names of a few who have asked me for information about "Tickletoes":

Betty Smith, Elizabeth Parkinson, Anna Kish, Betty Knox, Almeda London, Janet Nick, Lillian Hall, Sophia Cole, Margaret Phillips, Cordelia McCullough, Dell Lenhart, Verna Hays, Bernice Sanders, Evelyn Miller, June Perry, Maxine Smith and Ruth Bickel.

Mere words will not describe this wonder doll. In the first place "Tickletoes" is an unusually big doll—she's close to 20 inches tall. She's almost as tall as this newspaper is long. She has eyes that gleam with happiness and they open and close just like a real baby's eyes. She has rosy cheeks and a charming smile. She does some of the cutest things—plays with her toes, clasps her hands, sucks her thumbs and sits down just like baby sister. You know her legs and arms are made of rubber and you can scrub them with a brush. "Tickletoes" is unbreakable and is dressed in organdy, with stockings and slippers to match. Now you know something about "Tickletoes." Don't you want her for a playmate?

Don't wait! Write to me today and I'll send you a letter telling how you can get this big, beautiful "Tickletoes" all for yourself. Goodbye 'til tomorrow.

JOSEPH N. MACKRELL

Mr. Mackrell, county register of wills, who says life insurance offers the best means of solving the inheritance tax problem. Insurance paid beneficiaries is not taxed.

RECIPROCITY LAW SPREADS

Reciprocity among the states in the collection of death dues or inheritance taxes has spread to 37 members of the national commonwealth and the District of Columbia. The finance deparement of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, one of the organizations sponsoring the movement, reports that efforts are under way to carry it further in 1931.

In each of these states the intangible property of non-residents is exempted from inheritance taxes either unconditionally or on the basis of reciprocity—that is, on condition that estates of its residents are likewise exempted from taxation. This reciprocity idea is, in effect, an application of the golden rule to inheritance taxes. Before its adoption, a large part of an estate could be absorbed by multiple taxes. Each state that could do so joined the scramble. Some taxed the estate, others taxed the security holders and others taxed the securities.

Building Contract Awards Take Gain

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Totaling $47,222,000 for the past week, engineering construction contracts awarded in the United States showed a gain of nearly $10,000,000 over the $37,447,000 announced the week before and compared with $35,481,000 in the corresponding week last year, Engineering News-Record reports. The advance occurred mainly in the engineering divisions which include sewers, waterworks, bridges, power and lighting, telephone extensions and subways.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY GAINS

Department Store Sales Register Improvement; Hardware Demand Up

Retail trade has been showing a fairly good response to the near approach of Christmas and the more seasonable weather that has been prevailing, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. The volume of sales thus far has been somewhat lower than a year ago, although considerably greater activity in buying is reported by the larger stores this week.

A slight improvement is noted in the demand for dry goods and furnishing goods, orders being more numerous although largely for filling-in purposes. Demand for men's and women's clothing continues quiet, and not much activity is anticipated by jobbers in these lines before the middle of January.

SHOE SALES UP

There has been a moderate increase in the sale of shoes and rubber footwear, with the volume of business for the year estimated at about 15 per cent below normal. Hardware trade has been slightly better of late, although it is estimated that the volume of business for the year will be between 15 and 20 per cent below 1929. Lumber and other building materials are moving slowly and construction work continues rather quiet. There is a fair demand for confectionery for the holiday trade, and groceries and provisions are moving in fair volume.

There is a fair demand for electrical merchandise for the holiday trade, but electrical equipment as a whole has been moving rather slowly, and volume of business for the year is estimated at about 35 per cent below normal. Jobbers report a slight improvement in collections although the average continues rather slow.

GENERAL TRADE SHOWS GAIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Department of Commerce reports that general business witnessed an upward trend for the week ended December 6, the volume of check payments for the five days of the latest week increasing by 8.1 per cent over the preceding full week.

The downward trend of the past 10 weeks in wholesale prices appears to have been halted, the index of 120 commodities increasing slightly from the week previous. Prices of agricultural products were lower, but non-agricultural products were slightly above the week previous. Red winter wheat at Kansas City increased in price over a week ago, while the price of middling cotton at New York declined slightly.

Bank loans and discount of Federal Reserve member banks declined very slightly during the week and were also lower than a year ago. Stock and bond prices in general continued the decline of the past week. Bond prices continued above this time last year, while stock prices were materially under the average for the same week in 1929. Interest rates on call money was the same as the previous week, but time money rates increased for the first time in several weeks. Interest rates on both call and time money were considerably under last year. The Federal Reserve ratio was higher for the week of December 6, 1930, when compared with a similar period in 1928-29.

ACTIVE SELLING RESUMED IN STOCKS

Prices Hit Lower Levels As Several Big Blocks Are Traded at Opening

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Active selling was resumed when the stock market opened today, and several large blocks in miscellaneous groups changed hands. Bethlehem Steel dropped a point to a new low on a 5,000-share transaction. Standard Oil of New Jersey sagged ⅝ on a 5,600-share selling order and Anaconda dropped ⅝ on a sale of 6,500 shares. U. S. Steel, New York Central and DuPont each lost a point. Western Union dropped 3.

General selling continued throughout the early trading, sending United States Steel to a new low for the year at 137⅞, where it was off two points net. Other prominent issues making new minimums were Bethlehem Steel, International Harvester, Union Pacific, Eastman Kodak, Delaware & Hudson and Allied Chemical, with losses ranging from 2 to 3 points. Losses of at least a point appeared in virtually all the active issues.

A steadier tone appeared toward the end of the first half hour when offerings began to dwindle and shorts covered. It was apparent that the failure of Friday's rally to carry through had had a discouraging effect on sentiment, bringing considerable liquidation into the market for the two-hour session. There was nothing in the overnight news to induce selling.

Foreign exchanges were slightly eased. Sterling cables opened on $4.85 21-32, off 1-32.

LESS COTTON CONSUMED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Bureau of Census reports 414,887 running bales of lint cotton consumed in the mills of the United States in November against 444,494 in October and 541,153 in November, 1929. Total consumption for the four months of this cotton season amounted to 1,606,037 bales, compared with 2,285,600 consumed in the 1929 season.

Stocks of cotton, exclusive of linters, on hand November 30 compare as follows, in running bales: In consuming establishments, 1,566,854 against 1,352,885 on October 31, and 1,655,071 on November 30, 1929; in warehouses, 8,397,800 bales, against 7,542,596 and 5,812,658 bales, respectively.

Spindles active during November numbered 25,951,016 compared with 26,153,792 in October and 29,739,920 in November, 1929.

Exports were 907,649 running bales against 1,004,120 in October and 1,048,760 in November, 1929. Imports totaled 3,409 500-pound bales against 1,474 in October and 35,502 in November, 1929. Four months exports totaled 3,180,761 bales against 3,251,954 in the like 1929 period, while imports amounted to 14,451 bales against 104,084.

BUSINESS INDEX DROPS AGAIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Week by week business bumps along the rocky bottom of the valley looking forward grimly to the new year, expecting nothing more of this one, and getting it. The last months of depression are the toughest, but so is business sentiment by that time, and it becomes pretty hard to disappoint it any more, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

The general level of activity still fluctuates around the deadline, dipping again in the week ended December 6 from 80.3 per cent of normal to 77.1 per cent. A year ago, in the same week, the business index settled at 99.7 per cent. Basic industrial production continues to decline, along with freight movement, while retail trade rises, all according to the calendar, but hardly to the requirements of a merry Christmas.

What lies beyond the turn of the year becomes no easier to see clearly. Salvage crews are working to prop up or clear away some of the financial wreckage left by the tidal wave of deflation. The wave has not altogether subsided.

Washington Shaft Held Peril to Aviators

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The Washington Monument, mecca of tourists, is giving trouble to aviators.

Pilots say that, since the Capitol dome was lighted, the monument is the most dangerous obstacle to night flying in these parts and engineers are trying to find some way of illuminating the 500-foot obelisk without destroying its beauty at night.

At present a searchlight beam from the nearby Navy Building lights one side but is ineffective in misty weather.

Stock Exchange Topics

Monthly Statistics on Copper Operations Disappointing

Monthly figures on copper operations proved rather disappointing, this notwithstanding the fact that the total of surplus stocks of refined and blister copper on hand in North and South America as of December 1, showed the first drop, 10,712 tons, in many months. Disappointment results from the fact that the net reduction was due entirely to the falling off in blister stocks which contracted by 15,614 tons. Refined stocks, however, increased by 4,902 tons, this despite the fact that production in November was the smallest in several years for that month, totaling 112,646 tons or a drop of 5,583 tons compared with October.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividends of $1 a share on Fox A and B issues did not find any special reflection in the market action of the amusement shares as a group. A heavy tone prevailed in that quarter of the list during the major part of yesterday. Fox moved in a narrow range, showing a loss of around a point on the low levels. Warner Brothers was irregular in a narrow range, and Loew's, Inc., after holding firm throughout the day, was under considerable pressure of selling early in the final hour. The latter company reported earnings of close to $10 a share for its last fiscal year, and recently declared an extra dividend of $1 a share.

Yesterday brought the first change in the call money rate since September 30, when the charge went to the 2 per cent level, since maintained, after having ruled all day at 1½ per cent on September 29. There have been frequent fluctuations in the outside market in the interval, but the official stock exchange rate remained pegged steadfastly day in and day out at 2 per cent. Yesterday, however, after renewals had been arranged at the foregoing figure, a rather general calling of funds by New York banks depleted the supply available at that figure, and in the noon hour the rate for fresh accommodation was raised to 2½ per cent. The last mentioned rate had not been quoted in more than three months or since September 16. The firmer tone is regarded as temporary and due to mid-month settlements and preparations for treasury financing.

This week's Federal Reserve statement indicates that member banks again were disposed to take recourse to the credit facilities of the regional institutions. The consolidated statement indicates an increase of $46,000,000 in holdings of rediscounted bills, open market bills, and government securities, but because of a reduction of about $20,000,000 in the total of reserve credit outstanding in other forms, the net gain in the total of credit in use was $26,000,000. As compared with a year ago, the total of reserve credit in use presently is smaller by $392,000,000. Holdings of discounted bills are $512,000,000 below the same date a year ago, while holdings of United States securities are larger by $230,000,000. Indebtedness of New York City member banks to the reserve increased $13,000,000 during the week to $19,000,000 as compared with $66,000,000 this time last year.

Both Great Northern and Northern Pacific have speculative as well as investment appeal, in the opinion of one large commission house. It points out that both stocks have an attractive yield at current selling levels, and will earn in excess of their dividend requirements in 1930. Part of the income on the stock will be due, of course, to the $5 a share extra dividend being paid by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. When sentiment toward the rails turns for the better, it is contended that Great Northern and Northern Pacific again will attract considerable buying.

Resistance to selling has been shown by American Rolling Mill in several sessions recently when the general list was unusually weak. Part of the buying represented short covering following the announcement that Inland Steel had taken out a license under the continuous rolling patent of the company. However, buying also has come from outsiders who contend that the company has passed through an unusually trying year satisfactorily. Sheet steel business was affected adversely this year by reduced demand from the automotive industry. Any increase in the automobile business will help the sheet makers.

LONE STAR OFF AS SELLING APPEARS

Fuel Leader Drops Back Slowly as Entire List Sags in Quiet Trading

The short week-end session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange witnessed a moderate volume of selling in Lone Star Gas under which the fuel leader backed down slowly and got within shooting distance of the year's low market established in the break early last month. Several hundred shares of Lone Star were offered at the start, but the stock was taken on a slow recession and there was no evidence of a wide-open break. Aside from technical conditions within the market, there was nothing to account for the lowering tendency.

Industrial issues were quiet, but prices sagged in this department also. Blaw Knox opened off a large fraction at 24, down 4 points from the high reached in the late November rally, and comparing with the 1930 low of 23½ recorded November 10. United Engineering was slightly lower.

The declines here were induced by the weakness of the New York market, which opened lower and worked down to new low levels for the year.

Rubber Market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Rubber futures opened quiet; December, 8.20; March, 8.41; May, 8.60. New contracts—December, 8.30; March, 8.70; May, 8.80.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

MOTION PICTURE TRADE

The showing of higher quality pictures, which have stimulated a seasonally rising attendance, has brought a level of producer earnings in the current quarter considerably improved over that of the third quarter. Attendance, however, still is appreciably below that of 1929, and it is largely expense reduction that is enabling net income to compare favorably with that of the final quarter of 1929. Meanwhile, for the full year 1930, net income of most leading moving picture concerns will exceed that of 1929, largely in reflection of new theater acquisitions in 1930 and not because of fundamental improvement in the industry. Per share income comparisons will be less favorable, because of growth of capitalization necessitated by expansion.

PRODUCTION

The output of certain products cannot remain at its present level for a contracted period. Neither can prices. In the production of such commodities as steel, we are back where we were close to a quarter of a century ago. A country of 125,000,000 people and wealth estimated around $400,000,000,000 cannot be retarded 25 years and "stay put" at that level for any great length of time.

MIDLAND STEEL NEW PROCESS

Midland Steel Products Company has developed a process for producing pressed steel parts for electric washing machines, replacing castings. The company has received substantial orders for this material from washing machine manufacturers.

Building Activity Gains During Week

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Building picked up perceptibly last week as compared with the previous period, but the total was substantially under the same week of last year. In the totals that follow the daily average of contracts executed is given for comparable periods, covering the region east of the Rocky Mountains, as compiled by the Department of Commerce: Week ended December 6, $11,669,000; previous week, $8,170,000; same week last year, $21,722,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The Southern Pacific Railroad announced employes would be given opportunity to contribute 1 per cent of their monthly wages for relief of others temporarily without jobs or working only a few days a month.

Einstein Is Understood!

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

cars to see the Army play the Navy or vice versa.

If the football field is 100 yards long, he doesn't see why 22 men have to slug each other to prove it.

Prof. Einstein actually talked so people could understand him.

He must be weakening.

His next stop will be Hollywood. That's done it.

Army-Navy game today for charity. It's a million dollar huddle.

Two teams haven't met in several years.

Well, we would rather have our football players strangers than friends.

Might as well tell you reasons why two teams severed athletic confusions.

You can play football at Annapolis, graduate and still play again at West Point.

It has been do e. Our authority is old Navy player who starred at Annapolis in 1894.

This statement may start another one of those intercollegiate scrimmages between two guys who never went to school.

The Army and Navy actually hate one another. Even in war it is the same as football.

The Navy [illegible] them over.

But the Army's [illegible] the backs.

So you may not see a football game this afternoon. It never gets that mild.

But you will see the finest elimination tournament you ever refereed. The boys don't go in there to dribble and to diet.

They go in to fight. From tackle to tackle it is no well-bred line.

All we know is that it will be the peppiest kind of a convention of industrial chiropractics.

And also this contest is the most popular policy of this administration.

We like to see Army and Navy play if it's only to wonder why the boys study algebra, Greek and trigonometry.

And there will be thousands of beautiful girls there. Which is nice because both the Army and Navy are huddle-conscious.

CONVICT KILLED IN POLICE FRAY

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 13.—(AP.) D. I. Davis, 21, identified by police as an escaped Texas convict, died last night of wounds suffered in a downtown shooting affray in which more than 50 shots were exchanged by police and three gunmen. Two bystanders were injured.

The two other gunmen, identified as Cherokee Joe, alias Chin donner, and Colquit Davis, brother of the dead man, escaped through a veritable cordon of police. Authorities believed they still were in Wichita and were exerting efforts to find them.

Police said the men were the robbers who on Wednesday killed Con Keirsey, deputy sheriff at Wirt, Okla., shot Undersheriff Vernon Cason, and fled with the officers' automobile and weapons.

The gunfight resulted when Davis entered a physician's office to obtain treatment for gunshot wounds and the physician called police.

Child Explorer 'Hits the Rods'; Finds Santa

GRAFTON, W. Va., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—An all-night ride in a coal car, with snow beating down on his face, seemed quite long enough to 4-year-old Vernon Cunningham, a runaway from Cumberland, Md., to have brought him to the North Pole. That's why Mayor Charles O. King bears the title of Santa Claus.

A brakeman discovered Vernon as the Baltimore and Ohio freight train pulled into Grafton from the East. The boy was a bit vexed by the information that he wasn't headed for his aunt's house in Baltimore at all, but he forgot his troubles when he was turned over to Mayor King.

This man, so he reasoned must be Santa, with whom he could speak freely. Between bites of food supplied by his host, Vernon related how he slipped away from his grandparents and boarded the train.

WORKMEN HALT BANK ROBBERS

MADISON, Ind., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Answering an alarm spread by the wife of a bank cashier, a construction gang near Patriot, Ind., captured two men giving the names of William D. Houghton and William Hewig, both of Evansville, Ind., who admitted robbing the Florence, Ind., deposit bank, 30 miles east of here, of $750, less than half an hour before their arrival. The money was recovered.

The alarm was given by Mrs. Percy Dugan, who was alone in the bank when the robbers entered, and was ordered into the vault. The bandits failed to lock the vault door, and as soon as they left the woman rushed to a telephone. The construction gang erected a barricade across a highway to stop the robbers' automobile, which the man said was stolen in Detroit, Mich.

SUSPECTS SHOT BY DRY AGENT

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Two bootlegger suspects were shot, one possibly fatally, in a gun fight with Federal Prohibition Agent M. J. Buckley on an unfrequented road near here.

Hugo Prassa, 39, Lovall Valley rancher, was shot through the stomach, and critically wounded. J. Antone Providenty, 23, San Francisco truck driver, suffered a slight wound.

Buckley said he encountered Providenty on a lonely road near Sonoma. When he halted Providenty, who was driving a truck, Prassa, in an accompanying automobile, opened fire, he declared.

Prassa told officers he was driving about to frighten deer which had raided his crops, and opened fire on the dry agent when he believed the latter was holding up the truck driver. Prassa also denied knowledge of a still found after the shooting.

'Plain Egg' Urged As New Name of Storage Kind

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Something must be done, State Agricultural Department inspectors said, about a law concerning the age of eggs.

At a conference yesterday they decided a bill should be offered at the January session of the Legislature to abolish the expression "cold storage" in reference to eggs, and to let them be known thereafter as "plain eggs." At the same time the proposed measure would apply the term "fresh eggs" only to eggs less than 10 days old.

Man Goes on Trial In Ice Pick Killing

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 13.—Arthur Clements, alleged to have killed Scott Timms, 22, here December 3 by stabbing him through the heart with an ice pick, went on trial for his life in Cambria County yesterday. The state is seeking the death penalty.

PINCHOT ROAD PLAN OPPOSED

BEAVER, Pa., Dec. 13.—The Beaver County Supervisors and Auditors' Association at its thirteenth annual convention here went on record as opposed to the plan of Gov.-Elect Gifford Pinchot to take over for improvement 20,000 miles of rural roads in the state.

Proponents of the resolutions declared against what they termed excessive centralization of power. They also pointed out that some years ago the Department of Highways took over 13,000 miles of roads to improve, and that less than half that total had been completed. On this basis it would be a generation or two before the 20,000 miles would be improved, it was contended. The convention was addressed by highway officials, assemblymen and county commissioners.

U. S. SIFTS RUM RING IN TOLEDO

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The government today was questioning the first contingent of bootleggers caught in a sweeping campaign directed to learn whether law violators were buying organized "protection."

More than 20 persons, five of them women, were under arrest following yesterday's raids by 55 federal agents mobilized from four states under the direction of Edward J. O'Brien, of Detroit, United States special agent.

O'Brien said he expected questioning of those held to support reports that law violators paid thousands of dollars annually to be permitted to flourish. The raids followed a six months' undercover investigation.

Lee N. Murlin, United States district attorney, announced that a total of 30 warrants have been sworn out, but "higher ups" will not be arrested until they are indicted by the grand jury, unless they attempt to flee.

40 HURT IN INDIA CREMATION ROW

LONDON, Dec. 13.—(INS.)—Forty persons were injured today when Indian Nationalists carrying the body of a congressional leader through the streets of Bombay in huge procession clashed with police, according to a Central News dispatch.

The disorder occurred in the densely populated Girgaum district, in the heart of Bombay, when authorities refused permission to the Nationalists to cremate the body of their leader on the beach.

Those in charge of the procession finally compromised with police, and agreed to take the body to the regular cremation grounds. The procession then was allowed to continue.

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

ARMY-NAVY RENEWAL WOULD AID GAME

IT WILL BE a development for the good of football in general if the bringing together of the Army and Navy teams in a charity game at New York today leads to a permanent resumption of gridiron relations between the rival service elevens. When played annually prior to the break over eligibility rules following the 1927 season, this number was one of the pigskin sport's most colorful and popular features, and it will help the whole cause of football from every angle if it can be restored to the yearly schedule.

Charley Humber

Today's meeting of the Cadets and Middies, headed by Captains Charley Humber and Skipper Bowstrom, respectively, marks the fortieth anniversary of the opening of gridiron competition between Uncle Sam's academies, though this is only the thirty-first game on the list, owing to interruptions. The scene of the battle has been shifted from time to time to a total of seven places. Meeting at the Yankee Stadium today, the teams are playing in New York for the tenth time, though the previous nine contests there were staged at the Polo Grounds. Philadelphia has seen the tussle 14 times, West Point and Annapolis twice each, and Chicago, Baltimore and Princeton once each.

WHEN THE SERVICE rivals first clashed at West Point in 1890 one of the Army's star players in a 24-to-0 victory was Cadet Michie, for whom the present stadium at West Point has been named. Michie was one of the outstanding gridders of that period, and he continued to shine in the following season, when his 40-yard run for a touchdown was one of the features of the Cadets' second triumph, in which the score was 32 to 16.

The service game was one of the first in which the possibilities of the forward pass were demonstrated. The rulemakers brought in the forward pass and the onside kick together in 1906. The Navy developed a passing attack at once and beat the Army with it that season, 10 to 0. Seven years later the Army produced one of the greatest forward-passing combinations of all time in Pritchard and Merrilat, a pair that had much to do with defeating the Navy 22 to 9 in 1913 and 22 to 0 in 1914.

Skipper Bowstrom

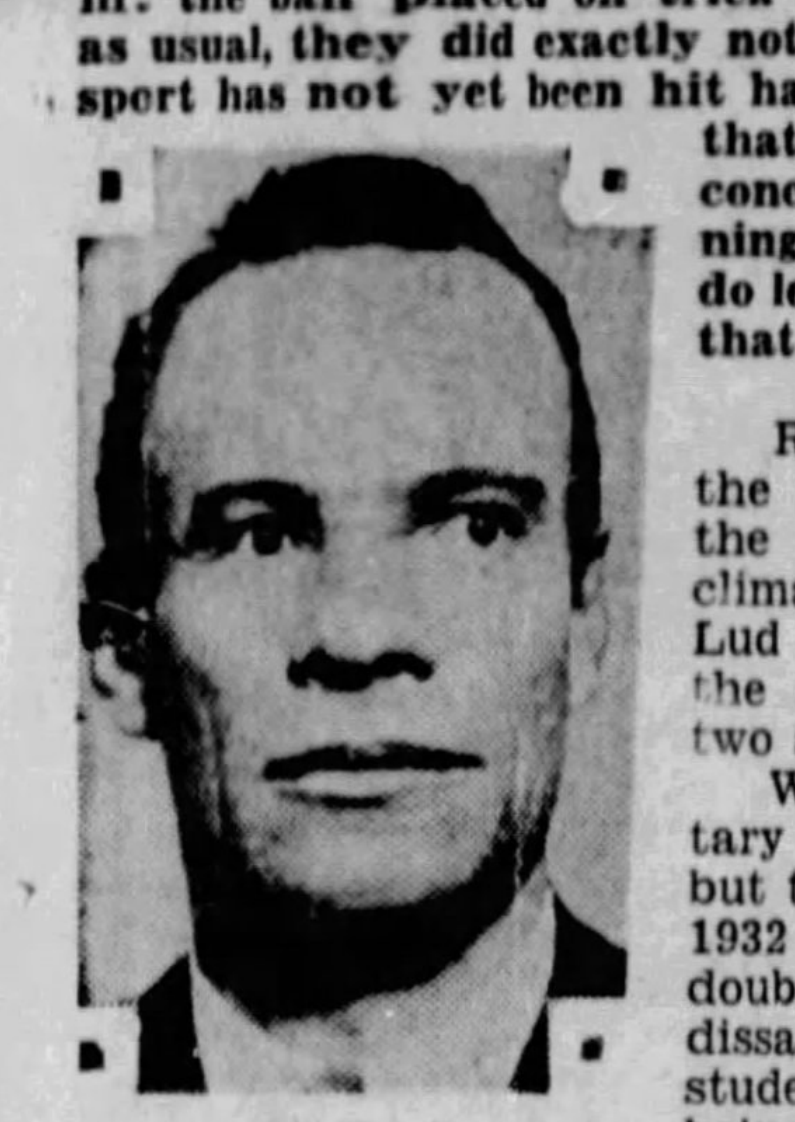
THE LONGEST STRETCH of consecutive victories standing to the credit of either team in the big game is four. The Army ran up that number twice—first in 1901-2-3-4 and again in 1913-14-15-16. The Navy's best string of straight wins was three, scored in 1910-11-12.

Cadet Paul G. Miller, of the North Side, whose playing career at center for the Army ends with today's game, is the fourth gridder from this district to figure in the service clash. The others were Ed Garbish, of W. & J.; Harry Wilson, of Penn State, and Tiny Hewitt, of Pitt. Cy Letzelter, of Carnegie Tech, starred in the backfield for the Army until recently, but was disqualified under the age regulations before he could face the Navy.

THE SERIES OF football struggles between the Cadets and Middies has been interrupted four times since the start 40 years ago. The first break came in 1894, due to an order issued by President Cleveland that neither team was to play a game away from its own grounds. The contest was abandoned for five years. In 1909 it was called off again on account of a fatal injury to Cadet Byrne, of West Point, in a game against Harvard. In 1917 and 1918 the teams did not play by reason of the World War, and they broke off again in 1928 and 1929 because the Army refused to accede to the Navy's demand that West Point adopt an eligibility rule limiting Cadets to three years of athletic competition.

IT WASN'T ONLY in the matter of player deals that the major league meetings this week were unproductive. Unless the rules committee comes through with a code change that will act as a remedy, and there is no record that the members have been instructed to do anything of the sort, another season will arrive with nothing done to cut down the enormous yearly output of joke home runs due to the lively ball and bandbox parks.

Following weeks of reform talk, the two big leagues fussed for hours over figures showing big annual increases in homers; they called in the manufacturers and pointed out that the ball was too lively; they discussed the zoning of parks, the screening of stands, the reducing of the resiliency of the pill, and Col. Ruppert's proposal to lift the ban placed on trick pitching 10 years ago. But in the end, as usual, they did exactly nothing. Evidently the business end of the sport has not yet been hit hard enough to make them wake up, and that's about the only end of the sport that concerns them. At that they were only running true to form. They can talk more and do less than any other body of business men that ever got together.



Lud Wray

RUMBLINGS OF DISSENSION among the players and other football troubles at the University of Pennsylvania reached a climax yesterday in the announcement that Lud Wray is out as head coach, in spite of the fact that his three-year contract had two seasons more to run.

Whether Wray's withdrawal was voluntary or forced is left to popular conjecture, but the payment of his salary for 1931 and 1932 indicate a dismissal, and there is little doubt that it resulted from openly-expressed dissatisfaction on the part of alumni and students following a season that, instead of being the successful one anticipated, brought four crushing defeats at the hands of Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Cornell and the Navy.

EVEN AT THIS early date, the addition of Wray makes a total of no fewer than eight prominent college coaches who have stepped down or changed jobs since the close of the regular season. The posts vacated by Wray at Penn, Bill Roper at Princeton, Nibs Price at California, and Wallace Wade at Alabama are still unfilled. Jimmy DeHart goes from Duke to Washington and Lee to succeed Gene Oberst. Wade moves from Alabama to Duke to supplant DeHart. Ira Rodgers is out at West Virginia, with Greasy Neale slated to take his place, and Eddie Casey steps into Arnold but no longer by any excessive margin.

Navy's smashing triumph over Pennsylvania last week did more than all the publicity in the world to start a spurt in ticket sales. The Midshipmen revealed a smoothly-working, powerful attack and a rugged defense against Penn and their stock took a sharp rise.

Another factor in the swing toward the Navy was the conviction, held in some quarters, that the Army could not hope to regain the form the Cadets showed against Notre Dame when they bowed by a one-point margin. Army also has been weakened by injuries, but still loomed a formidable machine for any opposition.

COLORFUL AFFAIR

Attracting almost as much interest as the players themselves were the corps of Cadets and the regiment of Midshipmen whose maneuvers have added much to the color of previous Army-Navy games.

Numerous notables from official Washington were here for the game, but most of the crowd was made up of just plain fans who had paid anywhere from $5 to $50 for their seats, the nearer the 50-yard line the higher.

Army and Navy met 30 times on the gridiron before the famous break in relations after the 1927 game. Army won 15 of these games, Navy 12 and three were tied. The 1927 game was won by Army, 14-9, chiefly through the exploits of Lighthorse Harry Wilson.

The march of the Cadets opens the ceremony at 12:15 o'clock with the Navy maneuvers following immediately afterwards. The kickoff was set for 1:15 p. m.

HOOVER NOT TO ATTEND

President Hoover, commander in chief of both branches of the service, was not able to attend the game because of the pressure of official business. He was represented by his military aide, Lieut. Col. Campbell Hodges. The President, however, did his share by autographing a football to be auctioned off between the halves.

Among those who came from Washington for the game were Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War; Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy; General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army; Admiral W B Pratt, chief of Naval operations, and Allen Hoover, son of the President. The list of boxholders and their guests read like a roster of the officially and socially prominent of New York and Washington.

SOCIETY TURNS OUT

Many social events were arranged in connection with the game, and New York's society joined hands with the Salvation Army in making it a success. The sale of programs was in the hands of 200 debutantes, who offered their services.

As a colorful spectacle, today's game outshone even previous Army-Navy clashes. Not only was there the customary parade of the Cadets and Midshipmen into the stadium, but both schools prepared unusual stunts for their cheering sections. The Cadet corps, 1,200 strong, went through a long rehearsal of its songs last night, while the Midshipmen had a carefully arranged series of formations with cards, spelling out words to back their cheers, and figures of the Army Mule and Navy Goat.

The weather this morning was clear and cold.

ROCKNEMEN SET TO GO

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The difference between professional and intercollegiate football, if any, should be strikingly demonstrated tomorrow when Knute Rockne's Notre Dame all-stars clash with the New York Giants, of the National Professional Football League. The game will be played at the Polo Grounds before a crowd of 40,000 or more.

Rockne has gathered together an imposing array of talent, including three stars of his 1930 machine, Carideo, Brill and O'Connor. Then there will be Law, Moynihan, Cannon, Twomey, Voedisch, Crowley, Hunsinger and a host of other heroes of other great Notre Dame elevens.

STRIBLING WINS OVER GRIFFITHS

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—W. L. (Young) Stribling, of Macon, Ga., has completed his conquest of the Chicago heavyweight field by a decisive 10-round victory over Tuffy Griffiths, the tough youth from Sioux City, Ia. As a result he may be recognized, by the National Boxing Association at least, as the champion of the world.

The fistic pride of the South, a 2-to-1 favorite before the battle in the Chicago Stadium last night, left no doubt as to his superiority, but not without calling upon all the ringcraft gained in more than 300 fights. He won the unanimous decision of Referee Ed Purdy and the judges over the best Griffiths Chicago ever saw.

The bout drew a somewhat disappointing crowd of 15,570 spectators who gave up $88,297.16. Just before it, Major General John V. Clinnin, president of the National Boxing Association, and chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, announced he had recommended that the N. B. A. recognize the winner as champion of the world, as Max Schmeling had failed to defend the title within six months of winning it. However, the recommendation must be approved by each member state in the N B A.

Ringside observers credited Stribling with six rounds and Griffiths three, with one even. Stribling weighed 184¾ and Griffiths 186 pounds.

BAT BATTALINO KEEPS TITLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Some thousands of fight fans were wondering today whether Bat Battalino, Hartford's favorite fighting son, had been vastly under-rated as a champion, or whether "All through" should be written on the long record of the young Cuban Negro, Kid Chocolate.

Battalino, whose performances had failed to impress the fight faithful, made a highly successful defense of his featherweight title in last night's battle before 17,000 Christmas fund contributors at Madison Square Garden. Yet, after watching him pound the Cuban's body for 15 rounds of relentless attacking to win the unanimous decision of the referee and two judges, the fans still were not sure whether it was Bat's strength or the Keed's weakness that brought the result.

It was Battalino himself, proudly accepting congratulations of friends on the success of his first appearance in New York who put the general opinion into words.

"Well, I guess I showed them I wasn't a cheese champion," he said. "If I am, I was pretty strong cheese for Chocolate."

Although he lasted the full 15 rounds, the longest route he ever had tried, Chocolate's third successive defeat was much the same as his first, when Jack (Kid) Berg ended his string of more than 100 victories. The slim Cuban Negro startled the fans in the very first round when he sent the champion down for a count of nine.

From that minute, it was all Battalino. Boring in, his arms wrapped around his head, taking Chocolate's blows on his elbows, and firing with both hands to the body whenever he got within range, the champion seemed to grow stronger as the fight went on. A great rally toward the end, which won him the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth rounds, turned the tide in his favor. The Associated Press score card gave Battalino eight rounds and Chocolate seven.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 13.—Two pretty good high school football teams, representing Redstone Township and Monessen high schools, in a virtual point-rating tie for the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League gridiron championship, battle here this afternoon in a specially ordered charity tussle, the winner to take down the official title for 1930.

Post-season W. P. I. A. L. games for the championship have been taboo for the last few years, due to a ruling of the league, and the football title has been awarded on a point system basis. Extenuating circumstances, however, induced the authorities to O. K. today's game, the fact that the two institutions wound up with only a fraction of a point separating them in the figuring and that it afforded the scholastic body to stage a really big and important game for charity influencing the action.

So the contest was arranged and will be played on College Field, home gridiron of W. and J. It is expected that a crowd approaching 10,000 will be on hand.

REDSTONE DEFEATED

Up until last week, both elevens were members of the select circle of unbeaten teams, although Monessen was twice held to scoreless draws. Redstone played a post-season game last Saturday, however, also for charity, and received a distinct shock when Clairton, fifth ranking Class A team, upset 'em with a 19-0 trimming.

Despite this defeat, however, Redstone rules a favorite in today's battle. It appears that the Townshippers played Clairton with three or four of their key men out of the action, including the sensational Jose Smith, captain and quarterback.

Smitty, they tell me, is to Redstone what Carideo is to Notre Dame, or an ace is to a royal flush. Smitty, who was on the hospital list last week, is to be in there this afternoon, a situation that does cause the countenances of Monessen adherents to become wreathed in smiles.

The first string lineup that has carried Redstone forward at such a killing pace (as far as it opponents have been concerned) will not be intact, however. Mitchko crackerjack right guard, is ill in the Brownsville Hospital with pneumonia, and his first-string understudy, Carderelli, has an infected leg and rates as a doubtful participant. Hencke, a sturdy little Dutchman, has been groomed for the job and figures, they say to start.

LINEUP SET

Redstone's ends will be guarded by Kapelic and Richnafsky. At the tackles, Kavanshansky and Martell will perform, with Stonko and Henecke at the guards, and Capriotti at center. Smith will be Pirate farmhands no longer will do their stuff on the team's baron ranch in South Carolina.

Officials of the Pittsburgh club today announced they would dispose of their ownership of the Columbia club, of the South Atlantic League. The local magnates have controlled this Sally League entry for several years.

A heavy deficit incurred in the past season is responsible for the decision of the Pittsburgh owners. The operation of the Columbia club was distinctly a losing proposition this year and the local men will withdraw their support.

It was from Columbia that little Lloyd Waner was advanced to the Bucos, but the team has failed to graduate any other outstanding star. It is not known definitely whether the club will continue in the Sally League.

The muddle draft situation in baseball is a source of worry to magnates on both sides of the fence. Five leagues are now practically cut off from the majors, the recalcitrants being the American Association, the International League, the Pacific Coast League, Western League and the Three I League. The first three named are the only Class A A circuits of the sport; the Western belt a Class A organization, while the Three I circuit is Class B.

A rift in the dark clouds is seen in the fact that the five leagues are not obligated to stand together. Any or all may accept the draft proffer made by the majors.

With this thought in view, it is believed that the Western League will soon be back with the other minor leagues so far as relations with the majors are concerned. Several clubs in the Class A circuit are deeply dependent on the major leagues teams and it would not be surprising to baseball men if this wheel took steps to restore the draft status.

FOUR SOCCER TILTS TODAY

By TOM BIRKS.

Four soccer games will be played this afternoon for local fans. Three battles will be staged in the Central loop and one in the Panhandle section.

Clan Douglas will be idle this afternoon, which will give the league leaders a chance to look over other contenders.

One of the feature games of the Panhandle League, Horning at Beadling, will be played, with Corns officiating. Beadling is in the race, but the Curry boys always can do their stuff in the little coal mining town. Squire Smith, of Beadling, as president of the Panhandle League, is making that loop one of the finest in this district.

In Central Pittsburgh, the Celtics go to Homestead to meet Mesta Machine; Union Switch finds a battle on its hands at Leslie Park meeting the Rovers, and, at Homewood, Pierpoint Motors hooks up with Crafton Heights.

Wray, Out at Penn, To Remain Coach

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13. — (AP.) — Lud Wray, who was dropped yesterday as head coach of the University of Pennsylvania football squad, told a radio audience last night that he expected to continue to coach, but did not intimate where.

"I have nothing to say about myself," Wray said. "I said I would take the blame if we lost, and I have. I cannot resist, however, taking this opportunity to thank the loyal players on the squad, of whom there are many; the entire coaching staff, including the freshmen coaches; the doctors, the trainers and those in other capacities around Franklin Field who have stuck by me, win or lose, and are still absolutely loyal and believe in me."

W. VA. CARD COMPLETE

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 13. — (AP.)—West Virginia University's 10-game football schedule for 1931 has been completed with the signing of the Kansas Aggies for a contest here next October 31.

Long's Sport Comment

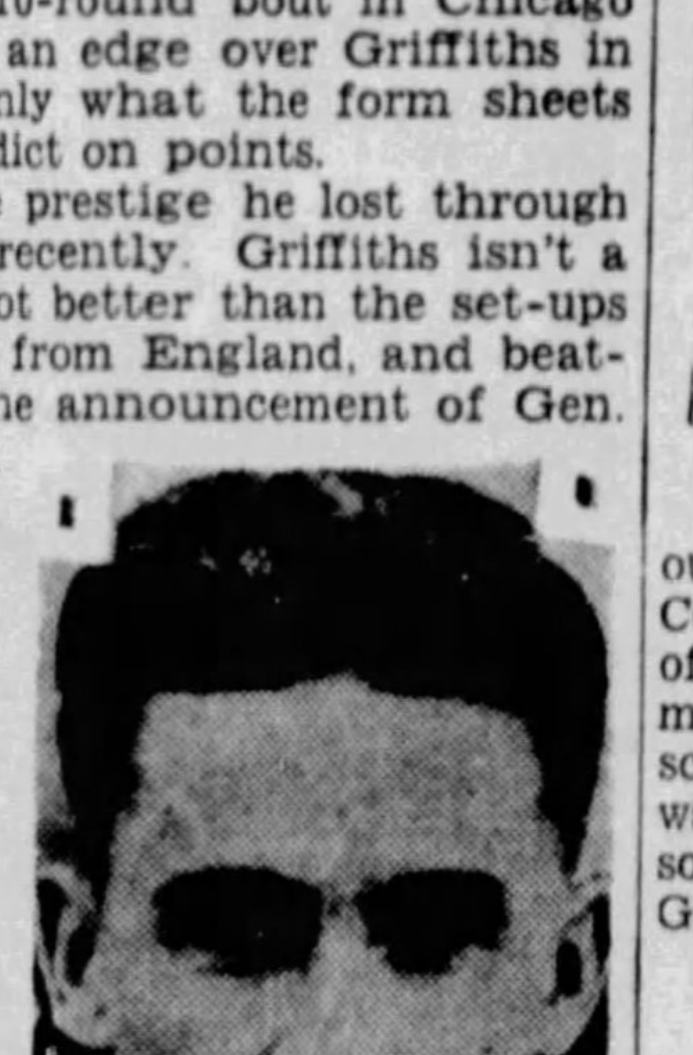
Horween's shoes at Harvard. Further changes are probable, too, and one of them may be nearer to home.

THE ONE SEEMINGLY lopsided fistic match which, in the opinion of most boxing folowers, "just couldn't go wrong" in spite of numerous other upsets in the same New York ring of late, went the way of the rest last night when Battling Battalino retained the world featherweight championship by receiving the decision over Kid Chocolate at the end of their 15-round argument. The only safe way to pick a fight in that city apparently is to string along with the short-ender. Chocolate, now beaten three times in a row, has twice been the victim of the jinx that has pursued odds-on favorites, along with Sammy Mandell, Al Singer and Jimmy McLarnin.

Whether the unexpected result means that Battalino has been under-rated or that Chocolate has gone back farther than was generally believed is a question that may be argued either way. For two-thirds of the route Chocolate showed the superiority in boxing class that had been credited to him, and if the bout had been only a 10-round affair he would have won. But, if he ever possessed either quality, he appears to have lost the ability to go the distance and to "take it" in the body. Battalino deserved to win by reason of superior endurance, aggressiveness, ability to travel a championship route, and having the fighting sense to stick to the only style of milling in which he had a chance, a persistent body attack. But as to his being a real champion, most fans are still unconvinced. His victory last night wasn't decisive enough to warrant his being rated equal to Fidel La Barba.

AT LEAST ONE fight in the ring game's most uncertain year may be said to have run true to the dope when Young Stribling won the decision over Tuffy Griffiths in their 10-round bout in Chicago last night. Stribling had appeared to hold an edge over Griffiths in all-around ability and class, and he did only what the form sheets had said he ought to do in winning the verdict on points.

Stribling's victory restores some of the prestige he lost through his poor exhibition against Arthur DeKuh recently. Griffiths isn't a champion by any means, but he's a whole lot better than the set-ups Stribling has been meeting since his return from England, and beating him is no part of a picnic. However, the announcement of Gen. John V. Clinnin, president of the National Boxing Association, that that organization will recognize Stribling as the world heavyweight champion on the strength of the victory will hardly be taken seriously by any one except the General himself.



Kiki Cuyler

JOE McCARTHY RESENTS insinuations from Cub headquarters that he did not enforce discipline and observance of the training rules while he was heading the Bruins. "I never handled a better behaved lot of players," he said. "Somebody has started a yarn that there was drinking by certain members of the team and that this helped to beat the Cubs out of the pennant this year. Hack Wilson broke the National League home run record and Pat Malone was the only pitcher in the circuit except Ray Kremer to win 20 games. Yet Wilson and Malone were the only Cubs who ever indulged in drinking, and there was mighty little of it, at that. I'd like to say a word in addition about Hazen Cuyler. Kiki came to the Cubs from Pittsburgh with the reputation of being a hard man to handle. From the outset, he never gave me the slightest trouble. He worked faithfully at all times. Late this year he got into a slump and Chicago fans were riding him hard. I saw that he was beginning to take the razzing to heart and laid him off for a couple of days, explaining that he had an injured thumb. When he returned to action he took a tremendous brace and finished the season in splendid style."

Homestead High set down Scott, of North Braddock, 17-10; Kiski Prep knocked off New Kensington High by a meager 26-24 tally; New Castle trimmed Wilkinsburg, 26-16, and Aspinwall walloped Millvale, 32-19, in more important exhibitions.

Avalon High took over Swissvale, 16-15; Braddock nosed out Mt. Lebanon, 16-15; Butler whipped Karns City, 40-14, and Beaver Falls won from Allderdice, 30-22.

Triple Tie Marks World Pool Tourney

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Making it their business to see that the defending champion, Ralph Greenleaf, does not have a runaway in the world pocket billiards championship tournament, Arthur Woods, New York veteran, and Ervin Rudolph, Chicago star, have gained a tie for first place.

Each has won three straight matches in the tournament. Woods and Rudolph turned in their third victories yesterday to join the titleholder, who had taken the lead Thursday.

Lawless Stops Cardi In Ninth at Erie

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 13. — Bucky Lawless, Syracuse welter, tacked an easy victory onto his record here last night when he scored a technical knockout over Gene Cardi, Wilkes-Barree, Pa., in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout. Lawless made a punching bag of Cardi from start to finish. Lawless weighed 150, and Cardi 153.

Basketball Rules Quiz

PLAY NO. 12

Garrett, of Dartmouth, is ruled out of the game against Boston College by the referee as a result of four personal fouls. The Dartmouth captain complains that the scorers had not given notice or warning that three previous personal fouls had been called upon Garrett.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER

The referee has no other option than to send the Dartmouth player from the game. It is not up to the scorers to notify a player that he has three personal fouls against him. However, the captain of a team may request the referee to obtain information on the number of personal fouls whenever this may be done without interfering with the progress of the game.

(This marks the close of the second week of this interesting series which will take the fans and players through 24 problems which may come up at any of the games. Watch for Play No. 13 next Monday.)

MIELES UPSET LEAGUE DOPE

By JULIUS LEVIN

The J. J. Mieles, rated at the start of the Allegheny County League as a mediocre club, have upset the predictions of the dopesters by the manner in which they have been sweeping aside all opposition so far this year.

Ski Twyman

Engaging in four league battles up to date the Mieles have emerged winners three times, losing only to the Duquesne Lafayettes by a narrow margin. This setback was suffered in the opening game of the season.

Since losing to the Scarlet Hurricane the Mieles have come through with victories over the Fintex passers, Charleroi Merchants and the Ellwood City Manhattans and have shown improvement with each game.

MAY WIN TITLE

With Artie Hoffman, Ski Twyman, Georgie Delvecchio and their supporting cast working in their present stride there is no telling what the Mieles may accomplish in the County League this winter. The team, judging from its showing so far, stands an excellent chance of replacing the Duquesne Lafayettes as champions.

The Miele's next big home attraction is with the Duquesne Lafayettes next Thursday night, and they are pointing for this battle determined to turn the tables on the champions. A victory will enable the local Italian club to take first place.

The Lafayettes have a chance to tighten their grip on first place tonight when they oppose the Charleroi Merchants at Charleroi in the Lone County League battle on the card.

KNICKERS AT COMMUNITY

In the West Penn League, Community House entertains Ducky Hill and his popular Knickerbockers. Two games are carded in the Wagner Institutional League, the undefeated Homewood team going to Sewickley Y, while Trinity Cathedral is at Coraopolis Y.

Wilmerding Y is at Hill Top, and Rankin Christian Center at Westinghouse Club in the County Amateur League. Tarentum Elks entertain the Catholic Forresters in the Greater Pittsburgh League, while Mt. Washington Triangles clash with Soho Community and Brentwood plays at Sharpsburg Y in the Metropolitan League.

SEWICKLEY BEATEN

Irene Kaufmann Settlement kept step in the Wagner Institutional League by defeating Sewickley Y, 38-36; the Penn Five copped from St. Michael's, 36-25, in the West Penn circuit, and the Mt. Washington Triangles topped Hilltop Y Reserves, 36-25, in the Metropolitan in the more important league contests last night.

St. Casimir's lost to St. Joseph's, 37-10, in the Lyceum League and the Trojans beat the Lang Club, 35-16, and the Falcons No. 69 tripped the Red Shields, 29-26, in Junior League contests.

Crafton Methodists defeated North Side Travelers, 30-26; Downtown Y won from East Liberty Y, 39-33, and an I. K. S. five walloped Tarentum Elks, 64-41, in independent contests.

Majestics, Olympics To Battle Tomorrow

The battle for the Independent Gridiron Conference title will be staged at Rainbow Gardens, McKeesport, tomorrow afternoon, when the Majestics and Olympics meet at 2:30.

With the teams deadlocked, this battle should be a thriller between two of the greatest independent aggregations ever gathered in this section. Managers Fred Iverson and Art Rooney have been sending their charges through special workouts in preparation for the game, and, with the winning of this game goes the first official independent title ever settled, and the splendid Honus Wagner trophy.

JACKIE RODGERS KNOCKS OUT DOMBROWSKI

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Jackie Rodgers, local Negro featherweight, clicked in his old knockout form last night, in his return to the ring after an absence of several months, against Soldier Dombrowski, Detroit southpaw, whom he dropped four times in the third round before Referee Red Robinson finally called a halt with 40 seconds still to go in the round. They boxed the scheduled 10-round main bout in the Moose Temple.

Rodgers appeared slow and off his stride at the start of the bout, contenting himself with taking a few solid right hand punches at his opponent while the latter outboxed and outscored him in the first round. Dombrowski continued the aggressor in the second round, but Rodgers managed to even that frame with rights to the body that made the Soldier wince.

FLOORED FOUR TIMES

In the third, Jackie continued his even pace until he suddenly leaped in and dropped his man with a right to the jaw, the last of a rapid series of three blows. Dombrowski took a count of eight and got up and slugged and another right floored him for nine. Another sent him down for eight and Jackie battered him down slowly under a barrage of punches near the visitor's corner for the fourth flooring, whereupon the referee called it a night.

Rodgers scaled only 122 pounds, a light figure for him, while Dombrowski weighed 121½.

Mose Butch, Oakland southpaw, refused to take seriously the claim of Johnny Sili, of Detroit, stablemate of Dombrowski, to the bantamweight championship of Italy, and belted him about the ring at will in every round but the last one of the six-round semi-final. Sili, hopelessly beaten at boxing, putting on a wild-swinging rally that won him that session, but the decision (ho hum, another one!) was a draw when Judge Frank Ferris disagreed with Judge Frank Brown, who checked for Butch, and voted for a Sili and Referee Robinson let it go at a dead heat. Sili weighed 116 pounds and Butch 121¼.

BALINT LOSES ON FOUL

Gus Britner, of Charleroi, 129, was painfully hurt when accidentally struck low by Paul Balint, of the North Side, 130¼, in the opening round of the second bout and Referee Robinson awarded him the battle. Balint was winning as long as the bout lasted.

Richard Greene, Negro, of Homestead, won by a technical knockout over Joey Perry, of Mt. Washington, brother of Jack Perry, former local welterweight boxer, in the fifth round of the opener, a hard-slugging affair throughout. The referee stopped it to save Perry, who was all in, from further punishment. Perry weighed 147 and Greene 149.

Dr. J. W. McMeans was the commission physician and Ray Eberle did the announcing. Robinson refereed all of the bouts. The crowd was not up to expectations for a Rodgers fight. Announcement was made that Jimmy Kelly, North Side walloper, will meet Eddie Brannon, Negro, of the Hill, in the 10-round main bout next Friday night, with Frank Novak, of the North Side, and Dan Gallagher, of the West End, heavyweights, rematched for the semi-final.

MASON TO BUY FIELDS

Red Mason was on hand and let it be known that he is angling to buy the contract of Jackie Fields, former welterweight champion, from Jack Kearns. Kearns paid Gig Rocne $10,000 for the contract and wants $15,000 for it. It is likely the deal will be consummated next week. Mason seconded Fields against Paul Pirrone in Cleveland last Wednesday night and took a liking to his fighting and immediately opened negotiations to buy him. The former manager of the late Harry Greb, who held the middleweight title, and of other leading local boxers, Red, now 62 years old, and the dean of local boxing men, still longs for another good ringster before he gives up the sport that he has followed since his boyhood days.

K. O. Christner, veteran heavyweight boxer, of Akron, who is in town training for his bout with George Panka, of Homestead, at Motor Square Garden Monday night, refuses to play the numbers racket while here . . . "I never gamble," he said yesterday, "I don't even take chances on punchboards—I do all my punching in the ring" . . . The K. O. Kris Kringle told of having come to Pittsburgh some years ago as a member of the Akron Goodyear Silents football team to play a local team on the Bluff . . . The Silents lost only four games in seven years and consisted of deaf mutes with the exception of Christner and one other player . . . Many of the opposing teams discarded their signals, figuring the mutes could not hear them, anyway, and, instead, called the plays, "Joe through center; Pete off tackle, Tom around the end," etc . . . One of Christner's jobs was to get the plays and wigwag them in the sign language to his teammates . . . At the banquet of football officials the other night, the favors were vest pocket razors. All of the scribes got 'em and are wondering now if a hint to cut their throats went with 'em.

Johnny Black, newspaper and publicity man, who died yesterday from pneumonia, will be missed when the next automobile racing season rolls around. Johnny made this game a paying one for several seasons on the dirt tracks around here and stuck with it after it went over the hill. . . . He dated back in the speedway game to the days of Bob Burman and Barney Oldfield and numbered most of the drivers and promoters around the country among his friends, while his newspaper pals were legion. . . . According to John Sullivan, this department's representative in Homestead, three former high school stars of that town, a cradle of basketball talent, will captain college quintets this season. . . They are Brud Stephens, of Duquesne University; Walter Berger, of Allegheny College, and Neen Campbell, of Slippery Rock. Campbell also was captain last year, being honored with re-election. . . All of these stars are products of Bill Campbell, former independent star, who is serving his sixth season as coach at Homestead High.

According to Sullivan also, two clubmates will swim against each other in the dual meet at the Keystone A. C. tonight between the University of Michigan varsity squad and an all-star local aggregation . . . They are George Vallowe and Herman Adelsberg, fellow members of the Homestead Library swimming team . . . . Vallowe is a sophomore at Michigan, while Adelsberg is a student at Pitt . . . . Rube Foster, the 51-year-old Negro pitching star, who died in Chicago the other day, was nationally famous for his achievements in baseball. In addition to being one of the greatest pitchers of his race over many years, he organized the Negro National League and saw service on the leading Negro teams in the sport. The Homestead Grays, of this city, were numbered among his intimate friends.

Art Shires is going on the stage as the leading man in a satire on professional boxing, entitled "Punch Drunk," which opens in California next month . . . . SACRIFICE FLY RULED OUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Goodbye to the sacrifice fly. Batsmen who lift long flies to the outfield on which base runners can advance a base will not be credited with a sacrifice hereafter and will be charged with a time at bat.

The joint rules committee of the major leagues has so decided.

Another change limits a batsman to two bases on all balls which bounce off the playing field. This was aimed to halt the epidemic of trick home runs made when the ball bounced off the playing field into the stands.

The American League approved the National League rule by which balls are judged fair or foul where they leave the playing field, and not where they are last seen.

PITT FIVE OFF FOR COLUMBUS

The University of Pittsburgh basketball team entrained early this morning for Columbus, O., where tonight it will play Ohio State U.'s courtmen in its second game of the season.

With Tim Lawry, forward, suffering from a severe cold, Coach Carlson intimated before he left that the lineup of the Blue and Gold team will be shifted, with Milt Cohen probably filling the berth.

Willie Kowallis, forward, Bus Albright, center, Capt. Willie Arture and Don Smith, guards, will be the other starters. Eleven men, coaches and managers, were in the party.

SCHOOL TITLE AT STAKE

Monessen's star fullback Mooney Waxman, was hobbling about with a bum leg for a couple weeks, but his injury is said to have healed to the extent that he will be fit to carry the brunt of the Monessen attack today. With him in the backfield will be Kotys and Stevenson at the halves, and Zelaska, a smart young feller-melad, at quarter. At the ends, Coach Ditty has Olchak and Ling. For the tackles, Knutilla and Spizziri are ready and at the guards, Monessen boasts a sturdy pair in Dustolfo and Nusser. Capt. Cotton will be over the ball.

A comparison of the respective records of the two elevens, which shows, among other things, that Monessen boasts an uncrossed goal line, would indicate that Redstone was a bit more powerful. The Township team has rolled up the huge total of 225 points against 39 for the opposition. Redstone walloped Donora, 26 to 0, as against Monessen's 6-0 win. Trinity fell by a 20-to-2 score against Redstone and held Monessen to 8 to 0. Monessen, however, won from Uniontown 13 to 0, while the best Redstone could do was take away a 7-to-0 triumph. There you are.

Given a dry day and field, the rival elevens are expected to throw a lot of passes. Monessen's machine is said to be more ponderous than that of Redstone and more likely to employ power plays. The Monessen defense is said to be practically air-tight, which its record would appear to bear out, for when a team goes through 10 ball games without being scored on, it becomes no chuckling matter.

The battle of the future all-Americans will be on the air, right along with its big rival contest, the Army-Navy charity game in New York. Washington's own broadcasting station, WNBO, will broadcast a play-by-play account of the contest.

The kickoff will kick off promptly at 2 p. m.

Niles, Memorial, Struthers, Liberty, Canfield, Austintown, Warren, North Jackson, Hubbard, Boardman, Girard, McDonald, Scienceville, have accepted invitations. South, Rayen, East and Chaney will act as host.

JACKETS LOSE TO LONDON BY 3-2 SCORE

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

London 3—Pittsburgh 2
Windsor 3—Detroit 1

STANDING OF THE CLUBS

GAME TONIGHT
Syracuse at Cleveland.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—In an overtime game, featured by a thrilling finish, the London Tecumsehs defeated the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, 3 to 2, here last night. Three goals were scored in the overtime period after the teams had battled to a 1-all tie. The Jackets forced the Tecumsehs to the limit.

After one minute of extra play Connors placed London in the lead when he took Leroy Goldsworthy's pass and scored, but five minutes later the Yellow Jackets again squared the game when McIntyre tallied on his own rebound. One minute later Goldsworthy fired on a pass from Leo Quenneville. The puck hit Fraser's stick and bounded into the Pittsburgh net to give London the honors.

FRASER STARS

Fraser was the outstanding star for the Yellow Jackets. He gave Abby Cox, Pittsburgh net guardian, plenty of protection. The Jackets took the lead in the opening period when Halliday scored on a pass from McIntyre after 10 minutes of play.

London tied the score after 17 minutes of play in the second period, when Groh scored on a pass from Briden. Pittsburgh was minus McIntyre at the time, who was serving a two-minute penalty for slashing at Quenneville.

REISE GETS HAND

The Londoners stormed the Pittsburgh nets in the closing minutes, but Cox blocked the attacks. Connors passed to Carson and Groh followed in for the rebound, but the whistle was sounded for an offside before the goal was scored. The third period ended scoreless.

Leo Reise, former London defense man, and now with Pittsburgh, was given a hand by the crowd as he made his initial appearance on the Yellow Jackets' back division. The lineup:

Pittsburgh—2.		London—3.
Cox	G	Stuart
Berlett	D	Holway
Fraser	D	Loughlin
Fields	C	Carson
Gregg	W	Goldsworthy
Proudlock	W	Connors

The LIFE OF THE PARTY

FILM REVIEWS, HOLLYWOOD AND NEW YORK CHRONICLES

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

Anxious to keep the people informed of the styles, we beg leave to report that the bellhops of the William Penn Hotel, who prefer to be known as bellmen, have changed to their winter uniforms.

The uniforms are deep green, trimmed in maroon, and the vests, too, are maroon. You can see for yourself, if you stroll through the lobby, that the bellhops make a colorful appearance. In fact, the customers are forever asking the hops where their whips are.

This uniform business is important to the keen bellhop, for he knows that one kind of uniform may induce the customers to be the more liberal in the matter of tips, whereas another kind may bring misfortunte. It is much too soon to reveal how the travelers have reacted to the green-maroon combination.

However, that brings us, if ungracefully, around to the subject of styles in clothes—more specifically, the unbuttoned bottom vest button problem.

Why should a man's bottom vest button be unbuttoned? As usual, we don't know. But our indignation overwhelms our ignorance. We worked up a pretty fury over the Pennsylvania Railroad Clock; we scattered a stampede of verbs and adjectives against masters of ceremonies, and our stirring stand against the younger generation is known from Fifth avenue to Sixth, but these spasms of rage are as nothing compared with our feelings on the unbuttoned bottom vest button problem. Is there a tailor in the house?

One day last week he was in conversation with a group of friends in Fifth avenue when he surprised them all by suddenly waving his arms enthusiastically in the direction of a passing street car.

"What," asked one, "is the matter? Green apples?"

"No," replied Fitzgerald, "but there goes a street car full of passengers."

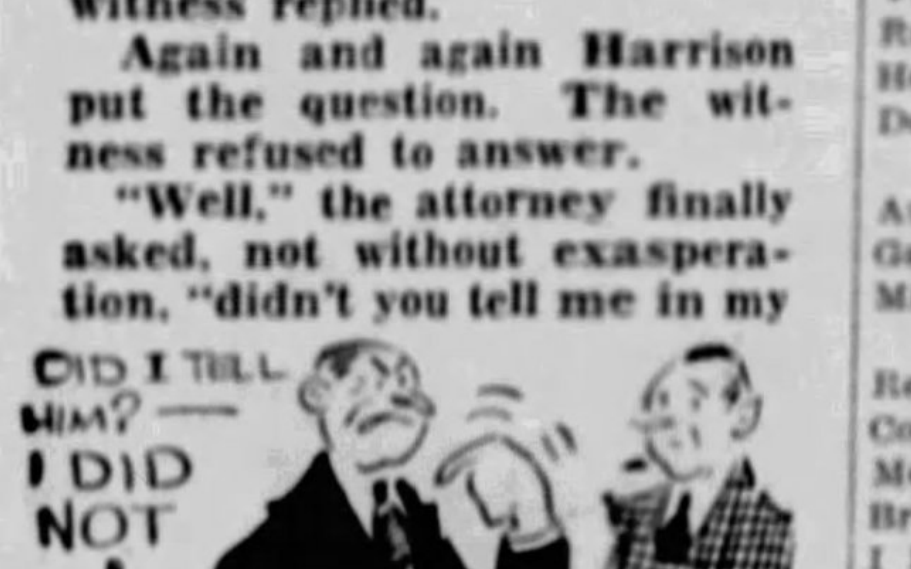
"Did you sign this lease?" Harrison asked his witness.

"I'm not gonna say," the witness replied.

Again and again Harrison put the question. The witness refused to answer.

"Well," the attorney finally asked, not without exasperation, "didn't you tell me in my office yesterday that you had signed the lease?"



"Say," the witness rose up in anger, "I told you a lot o' things in your office that I'm not gonna say here, where they put it down black on white."

Fake Ticket Seller Paroled by Court

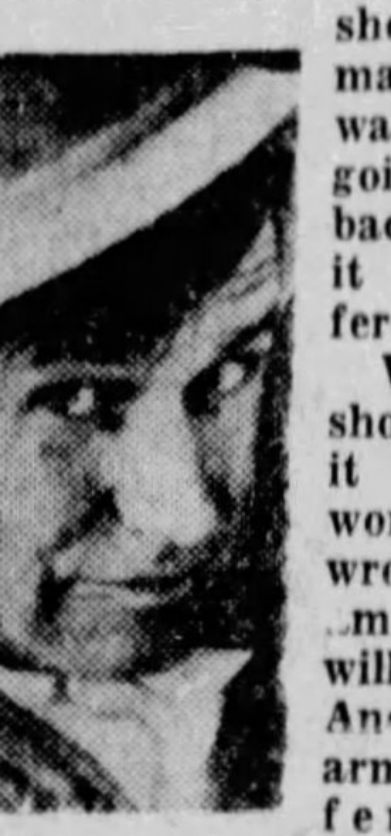
Joseph P. Silow, of Philadelphia, who pleaded guilty with two others to selling fake tickets for the Pitt - Notre Dame football game, was paroled for 18 months late yesterday.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal.
Dec. 13.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Germany has banned that splendid film, "All Quiet on the Western Front," on account of it showing Germany losing the war. They are going to take it back and make it with a different finish.



Will Rogers

Well, they can show us losing it and they won't be far wrong, and I am sure there will be no kick. Another disarmament conference disbanded in Geneva without doing anything, but getting more suspicious of each other. If any two nations don't hate each other, why just let 'em confer on something, and they will before it's over. Stop conferring, and you will stop fighting.

Yours,
WILL.

Mary Duncan's Fadeout Wasn't Final—She's Back in Films

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, by [illegible] Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 13.

Ballyhooed extensively by Fox, Miss Duncan didn't click as was expected, and faded out of the picture. By all rules, she should have stayed out.

Within the last few months, however, she has been making a new start. Universal signed her for "The Boudoir Diplomat," and now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will use her in "Among the Married." The latter offer came just as she was ready to return to New York and do a play.

Mary Duncan.

According to the original plans Robert Montgomery was to have played a lead in Vincent Lawrence's serio-comic study of modern matrimony, but there is a doubt now of his being in the picture. Roland Young is mentioned for a role, but he is not certain either.

TEAMED AGAIN

Those who enjoyed the picture, "Laughter," will find satisfaction in the news that Harry D'Arras, the director, and Donald Ogden Stewart, the dialoguist, are again to collaborate on "Week End."

New York saw this Austin Parker comedy last season.

I NOTE THAT—

Cecil B. De Mille has a volume of 5,000 selected letters received about his picture, "King of Kings" — Eddie Quillan is back in town after a personal appearance tour in the East . . . Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has had a birthday . . . The Duke of Sutherland is a visitor at Pickfair . . . Harry Brand, the publicist, is back at home, recuperating from his third operation this year . . .

Eddie Quillan

R. K. O. BUYS

One of Radio Picture's new films will be made from Maurice Dekobras' "The Sphinx Has Spoken."

Dekobras is the author of "The Crown Prince," "Madonna of the Sleeping Cars" and several other works.

John Charles Thomas, a popular baritone, who gets better and better as the years go by, gave a recital in Syria Mosque last night. The audience liked his singing at once, but after he had taken his patrons into his confidence with a little speech, he could do no wrong.

J. Fred Lissfelt

Thomas' voice must have been right always. It is beautiful throughout its long range, and responds easily and accurately to all demands of the music. But in the deepest understanding of great music is where Thomas sometimes fails beyond comprehension.

His program looked most promising; after he had paid homage to the classics, he must have felt that he should sing to the gallery, and we finally stayed to listen to Lindy Lou and Old Man Ribber. It is all most entertaining music but questionable contributions to a series of concerts which include Kreisler and Onegin.

There is no denying the right of every singer to assert his own musical feelings through the medium of his songs, but Thomas chose to alter that lovely air of Carissimi and Hugo Wolf's Heinweh in such fashion as would permit him to sing the Psalms of David to the rhythm of Yankee Doodle And yet he gave the Marx song a most eloquent reading.

His character songs are always successful, for he brings to peasant and dialect poems a most delectable humor. As an operatic star he sang the Brindisi from Hamlet in the French grand manner, both theatrically and vocally superb.

Lester Hodges played rather sympathetic accompaniments, and contributed some parlor solo numbers. He could well have chosen some more substantial music, for his playing seemed to warrant it.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

MISS BRENT, AMES IN SHERIDAN PICTURE

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

Evelyn Brent is a beautiful woman with what is commonly known as a "rich voice." Robert Ames is a good-looking man who talks too loud in the movies. Josephine Dunn is a thin-lipped young blonde with a profile. The three of them make "Madonna of the Streets" a fair movie in the Sheridan Square.

The situation revolves around an idealist, Peter Morton, played by Ames, founder and head of a poor—a very poor—settlement in the San Francisco slums. He has been notified that he inherited $1,000,000 from an uncle, victim of an auto in Paris. What will he do with all that money? Why, build him a million-dollar home for bums.

But Miss Brent, as mistress of Morton's uncle, is of another mind. When her sweetheart was killed he was on his way to instruct his attorney to make the young lady, not the nephew, his beneficiary.

Miss Dunn, meanwhile, is a very, very wealthy young San Francisco daughter of a man whose dockyards are tied up by a strike, whose former employes are being fed by Morton.

'GRUMPY' PLEASANT CRAB IN ALDINE

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Grumpy" is the very pleasant mixture of light comedy and melodrama on the Aldine screen. Cyril Maude, prominent English actor who retired from stage a few years ago, is the star in this talkie version of "Grumpy," which he played on the stage in more than 1,600 performances. As a play "Grumpy" is too trivial for a man of Mr. Maude's high talents, but the character title part is one of the most attractive that ever fell into any actor's hands. It is that of an outwardly crabbed old man whose bluff manner just serves to endear him more and more to those who love him and know that he is just an old humbug instead of an old bear.

Now then, take a character like that and get him mixed up in the solution of the theft of a diamond and in the matter of seeing that juvenile hearts do not wander too far apart and you have plenty of it in the matter of type portrayal and plenty of hokum and rather obvious situations in the matter of drama. But it all means pleasure and a happy ending after some [illegible] of trouble.

Mr. Maude is in the center of camera range most of the time but that is something to be thankful for. Another is the charming Frances Dade, owner of one of the aforesaid hearts. Phillips Holmes and Paul Cavanaugh also are prominent.

A Hardy and Laurel comedy, cartoon farce and Hearst Metrotone news pictures, including views of Notre Dame's final victory of the season, also are on the bill.

WAR DEBASING WOMEN IS LESSON TAUGHT IN 'WAR NURSE'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

George Seibel

IT'S A GRAND WAR!

But in some respects it's a grand war. These nurses wear the most expensive night-gowns. They converse in the most up-to-date Ringlardner lingo. They were evidently picked for their looks, with one exception from Kansas. And off duty they are gowned in very nice furs and furbelows.

The heroes also have a ready supply of Ernesthemingway phrases. They are always having a glorious time or being blown to pieces. Between orgies and explosions their life must be rather monotonous.

A VERY FINE CAST

The picture is rather uninspired, but there is a very fine cast and no expense has been spared to make it a thrilling spectacle. The trouble is that we've heard so many shells scream, have seen so many buildings wrecked, that it's rather tame. Big Berthas sing us to sleep. The toy tiger in the News Reel is more thrilling.

But with sturdy heroes like Robert Montgomery and charming nurses like Anita Page and June Walker, to say nothing of the languishing Zasu Pitts, "War Nurse" will serve very well to spread the gospel of peace.

There's a good stage show, too, in which the Audrey de Pew quartet do some marvelous adagio dancing, while Slim Moore and Pal get in some merry clowning. Ted Claire was master of ceremonies, and Wild Oscar taught the singing class all about Einstein.

THEMES ARE VARIED IN NEW STAGE BILLS

Turning from the serious biographical studies such as "Abraham Lincoln" and "Mary Stuart," the English dramatist, John Drinkwater, wrote a flashing comedy, "Bird in Hand," which comes to the Shubert Alvin for a week beginning Monday night.

Linda Watkins, the leading woman in the Theater Guild's production of "In the Meantime," coming to the Nixon Monday, attended the guild's school of acting, but this is her first appearance in a Theater Guild production. She was seen on Broadway in "June Moon."

"Daddy Dumplins," the leading character in the play of the same name, to be produced by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week, is one that Macklyn Arbuckle played in the original production in the Republic Theater, New York.

A new bill opens today in the Harris, the screen feature being "The Fourth Alarm," with Nick Stuart. There also is a vaudeville program of five acts.

Heinroth Organ Recital Program

Dr. Charles Heinroth will give the following organ recital program this evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Carnegie Music Hall:

Suite "The Good-Humored Ladies," Scarlatti, 1, Overture; 2, Dance of Constanza;, (Andante); 3, Plot against Luca, (Allegretto); 4, Dance of Leonardo and Battista, (Andante); 5, Conspiracy, (Fuga Moderato); 6, Final Scene, (Presto); Pastorale, Roger-Ducasse; Chinoiserie, Swinnen; Two Movements from Symphony in A Minor (The Scotch), Mendelssohn, 1, Andante Con Moto, Allegro un Poco Agitato; 2, Adagio; Scherzo in G Minor, Bossi; March from "Tannhauser," Wagner.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 13.

Too bad the way that cub reporter handled Mrs. Keith-Miller, whose plane was forced down in the tropics . . . His fable did her great harm . . . The minds over at the airports in Miami will tell you the truth about her flight . . . The ground marks revealed that it was a forced landing—her gas tank was dry . . . I met her last night.

"They criticized me," she was saying, "because I flew without a bank-and-turn indicator. I couldn't afford to buy one, that's why."

The Pittsburgh group which offered her $1,000 to risk her life gave her $250 on account . . . They won't kick in with the rest of it . . . She is a plain looking person . . . Sincere . . . And miserable over the ugly reports that made every front page—that she did it for a publicity gag . . . When she broke a transcontinental record last year the rags practically ignored the achievement . . . But when they thought she was dead, the page ones glorified her . . . She was a heroine! . . . Then when the anxiety of the country was relieved—and she was found alive, a desperate-for-a-story kid tried to make a phoney out of her . . . Madame Du Barry's amiable desire was, to make every woman who hoped for a heaven hereafter experience a hell on earth.

And that tricky interviewer . . . After the collision at Stafford, V., June and the baby had to be interviewed . . . Suffering only from crash shock she had to listen to sappy queries . . . I thought all the chumps who carried police reporter cards went out of fashion years ago . . . I mean the sort of dopes who cornered a visitor on the liner before it reached New York and asked him:

"What do you think of our American girls?" . . . Or "What do you think of America and New York?"—Before they could set foot on our soil . . . "Would you be happier if you were married to a business man instead of a columnist?" one clown asked her . . . "Who said anything about being unhappy?" June snapped . . . "How does it feel to meet so many celebrities?" the same guy queried . . . "I do not know," she kidded, "you tell me. How does it feel?"

He probably went away hating New Yorkers more than ever . . . If the machine wasn't so strong they might have been killed.

B. A. Rolfe's crew on the air the other night played the oldest tunes . . . Two hours before Florida experienced its "coldest" day the newsboys were hysterical announcing that it would be . . . Wonder what happens when they have a murder here? . . . That Bishop Manning-Judge Lindsey thing is third-rate stuff . . . The New York newspapers get here too late . . . They sell the N. Y. Sunday rags here on Fridays . . . So Mr. Capone is in Chicago. Or Poughkeepsie. Or New York. Is he? . . . Hehehehe . . . Wonder if Equity, which is the actors' union, would want that coin from that shoe firm if it knew the shoe firm made its staff take a 10% cut in wages, or else . . . And, how come Equity accepts such air from non-union workers, anyhow? . . . Ah, charity—how phoney you are in New York . . . The reason New York has so many breadlines is that the panhandlers from the provinces know New Yorkers are more generous, the editorialist says . . . It is fascinating watching the telegrapher rattle this off on a direct wire to the office . . . Tap, tap, tap, and in less than a breath it's there.

That wasn't a bad yarn in the one dramatic section Sunday about the abuses of publicity . . . I liked that part of the article most, however, which said that Jimmy Durante coined the phrase:

"A Broadwayite who slaps your back is only looking for a place to knife you."

Wonder if that engineer who handled the train from Jacksonville to here has learned how to drive it, yet? . . . Maybe he was teaching his wife how to drive it . . . His passion was starting or stopping the dambed thing, not by degrees, but suddenly . . . Very cute . . . That monkey business in the rags the other day dated Capetown—about the baby boy who was kidnaped by apes 14 years ago, and was just found by hunters, was obviously a counterfeit . . . If it is on the up'n'up how do they know the boy was kidnaped that long ago—what are the names of his parents or kin? . . . Or better yet, the tags of the hunters who rescued him? . . . Horsefeathers!

Beverly Smith's reprint of that femme columnist's letter was very amusing . . . She was beefing about the readers who submit their poems and other things, and who urge her for Frank Criticism . . . Her reward, it appears for telling them the truth, is invariably a sarcastic letter . . . So she won't tell them the truth anymore, she says . . . Henceforth she will tell those whose opinion of their own stuff is great, that:

"Your stuff is wonderful. Any editor who turns it down is a fool."

Now, that will be a double waste of time . . . It's about time to help the employe" for a change, and if she doesn't waste-basket their drivel, she will only help to throw the wicker makers out of work . . . I have a better system . . . If the letter doesn't interest me it is merely dropped on the floor . . . If it makes the wicker, okay . . . If it doesn't, okay, also! . . . The porter eventually comes in—sweeps it up with other hooey, and the next day a waste-paper man comes to collect it . . . Right there I am helping two people, the porter and the waste-paper man, to make a living . . . Then there are the men who turn that paper into cardboard, rags, etcetera.

I'm glad Bill Bolitho's show got such good notices from the mob . . . He was a grand essayist . . . Wonder how "The New Yorkers" show got over? . . . Dry cigarets make you cough . . . The Xmas issue of Life, incidentally, offers a quip about coughing in a theater . . . And then the same gag is credited in the same issue to a foreign rag . . . I like those reprints of drawings by Gibson in that mag . . . The Civic Forum of the Woman's City Club of Greater Miami would like it very much if I would make a talk on publicity, touching on its relation "to civic development" . . . No kiddin'? . . . I will go to see the wrestling match, instead, which will give them a rough idea on what I think of people who make speeches . . . Civic development! What the hell is civic development? Someone, though, ought to remind the press agents that the best way to crash space in a newspaper is to follow the rules set down by editors for reporters . . . Get the facts of the story in the first paragraph . . . The 5 W's—meaning Who, What, When, Where and Why!

Funny how some people have it all figured out . . . That local who wrote a open letter to me in his column today . . . He was glad, he wrote, that I selected Miami Beach for my first "vacation" . . . A change of scenery to him is a vacation . . . He can't see, he said, why anyone should need a vacation who merely sits in theaters, and, in night clubs all the time, and jots down the things one sees and hears . . . Oh, sure . . . As some wag once explained writing—you just put down one word after the other! . . . And as the saying goes, there, you are . . . Maybe that's why the unemployment sitch-ee-ay-shun is what it is . . . Considering that there are over 22,000 persons who have made up their minds that they are going to be journalists . . . Maybe that's why, too, I got a good break in the racket . . . I made up my mind I wouldn't be a writer . . . Which proves I HAVE a mind . . . There's no coin in WRITING.

STRIKES TWELVE AND MYSTERY IS LOOSE IN THE STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Cat Creeps," mystery melodrama, is creeping across the Stanley screen. Yes, the wind howls, the thunder rumbles, the dogs bark, the shadows loom, the shrieks sound, the house is desolate and the will must be read at midnight.

Some day, maybe, the movies will give some sunlight with their mystery and the novelty of it will make you sit up and take notice. Until then, you can only pray for the dawn, or for the finale—depending on your state of mind.

A RESTLESS NIGHT

In "The Cat Creeps," the heroine would like to get an eyeful of dawn. She's in a great big and dismal house. She's sole heir to a fortune left by an eccentric old gentleman. She's surrounded by none too friendly relatives; by a clock that strikes the midnight hour, though it isn't running, and, if she's to believe the housekeeper, by a flock of spirits from the other world. So, putting it mildly, she has a restless night.

'TIS A GRAB BAG

"Grab Bag" is the new Ed Lowry stage show. And like a grab bag, it discloses an assortment of things good and not so good. Arnaut Brothers, whistling clowns, act as birds for a lot of laughs. Peggy Bernier, personality girl, is back. She sings "honey" songs to Mr. Lowry and also does an imitation of him singing "The Vagabond Song." Audiences like her a lot.

Carlton Brothers, four of them, go in for slapstick comedy and dancing. They're a sort of imitation of the Ritz Brothers. Stella Powers and Miriam Lax sing a song.

MADAM SATAN TAKES PARACHUTE RIDE IN FULTON

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Madam Satan," a Cecil B. De Mille picture, opened yesterday in the Fulton. Mr. DeMille still goes in for the spectacle. But he seems to have lost his sense of values. His newest film is a hodge-podge of farce, melodrama, burlesque, music and—what have you?

The DeMille is extravagant with his elaborateness. But he is cheap with other things. He permits a cultured lady to say "I'll get so hot, you'll have to call the fire department to put me out." Some of the comedy borders on slapstick; some is tawdry; some is worth while.

BEDROOM FARCE

The theme is that of an aristocratic wife who turns vampire in an effort to keep her husband. There is a lot of bedroom farce at the beginning. At the end there is a dirigible crash.

DeMille "throws" a big masquerade party on this dirigible as his spectacle display. You'd think it was a town hall, the number of persons he crowds aboard. A singing and dancing ensemble is on hand, too.

The wife comes to the party dressed up as Madam Satan—so the title. She's there to get her husband away from other women.

HAPPY LANDING

When the dirigible cracks up the parachute jumping season opens. It's a thrilling and funny sight. Everyone gets a parachute except the husband. But he doesn't need any. He's the hero, so he is sure to land safely for the happy fadeout.

Reginald Denny, Kay Johnson, Roland Young and Lillian Roth top a large cast. Mr. Young, in a comedy role, is the film's best bet.

SCHOLARSHIPS AND MONEY AWARDED

Many Pupils and Parents Turned Away as Crowd Overflows Memorial Hall

Several hundred proud mothers and fathers and their children weer turned away from the prize awarding exercises of the Better Traffic Committee in the crowded Carnegie Music Hall last night. The exercises climaxed the fourth annual traffic essay contest.

More than 300 adults and children milled around in the lobby, unable to get into the auditorium. Early comers filled the auditorium and at 7:45 the lobby was crowded.

CROWD SENT AWAY

Programs were scattered among the crowd in the lobby so the hopeful children might see whether their names were among the prize winners. If their names appeared they were admitted.

President of Council John S. Herron awarded the cash prizes. The speakers were Councilmen W. Y. English, George J. Kambach and C. B. Connelley; Frank Duggan, Jr., chairman of the committee, the Rev. Paul E. Campbell, superintendent of the parochial schools, J. Freeman Guy, associate superintendent of public schools and Walter Rosenbaum, chairman of the education section of the Better Traffic Committee. BRIDGE FRIENDS TRADE WIVES

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—(INS.)—The Robert F. Steiners and Lee Sims, radio pianist, and his wife, form a congenial bridge foursome, playing several rubbers almost nightly and exchanging partners frequently.

Just as they exchange bridge partners in their frequent games, they have also exchanged life partners, it was revealed today.

Mrs. Sims is Ilomay Bailey, stage and radio singer. She used to be Mrs. Robert F. Steiner. Mrs. Steiner used to be Mrs. Lee Sims. Recently Steiner and his wife were divorced. Then the Simses were divorced. Shortly afterward the former Mrs. Steiner became Mrs. Sims and the former Mrs. Sims became the new Mrs. Steiner, and they have been enjoying their bridge together ever since.

APPLE SELLING AIDS FAMILIES

Unemployed men in Pittsburgh are earning between $1,500 and $2,000 daily selling apples on street corners, according to Alexander Murdoch, chairman of the Pittsburgh Apple Committee. The head of one welfare society reported to him, he said, that 87 families which had been receiving help from the society had notified officials they would no longer require aid.

The men are selling on an average of two boxes daily, which net them about $4 profit, he said.

NEIGHBOR KILLS MAN IN FIGHT

County detectives today are holding Robert Wedlock, a Negro, of House 44, Burdine, in connection with the fatal shooting last night of Theodore Watts, 27, a Negro, who lived in an adjoining house, detectives said.

Watts was shot in the chest by Wedlock, after he was alleged to have attacked him with a knife after coming to the latter's home in search of his wife and stepdaughter. He was said to have ejected them from his house Thursday night.

The stepdaughter, Mildred Jones, eluded Watts by running to the second floor of the Wedlock home. Watts then was said to have turned on Wedlock with a knife. Wedlock fired, killing Watts instantly, detectives said.

'Number' Men Books Seized in Greensburg

GREENSBURG, Dec. 13.—County detectives continuing their drive against "numbers men" in the clearing house lottery racket, arrested Samuel Miller and Joseph Bowen, both 30, of Pittsburgh, who they allege were working for the Trinity Clearing House Lottery, of Pittsburgh.

Money and books were seized, the detectives said. The men waived a hearing and were held for court under $1,000 bond each.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Dec. 13—(AP.)—The trouble, authorities said, with the claim on which William McDonald collected $50 from a mine union to bury his six-year-old son, was that the boy was alive.

McDonald was arrested.

ALIMONY, FEES ASKED IN SUIT

An allowance for counsel fees and alimony was asked in Common Pleas Court in the petition of Mrs. Dorothy E. Anderson, Craft avenue, in the suit of her husband, Carl Anderson, Swissvale, for a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

Anderson's income is about $5,000 annually and he has failed to support her since filing his divorce action about three years ago, the petition alleged. Mrs. Anderson averred they were reconciled when her husband returned to her November 15 last, when he informed her he did not intend to pursue the divorce action. They have since parted and she has been notified the action will proceed, according to the petition. They were married September 1, 1926, and previously separated October 4, 1924, it was alleged.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—A tornado following a hail and rain storm in the southern part of Santa Fe province yesterday did considerable damage. Parts of the provinces of Cordoba and Buenos Aires were swept by the storm, which destroyed crops to an estimated 30 per cent.

Blind Pensioners Veto Payment By Mail

Letters were sent to them explaining they could stay at home and still receive their money, thus saving long trips to the public welfare office, but with the approach of pay day all but 310 of the 1,180 appeared in person. Attaches of the office asked why and got the following replies:

"I'm not taking any chances."

"It might be lost."

"It's so much fun to come down."

"The neighbors might steal it."

"I like to be in the crowd."

The over-assessment covered income tax payments in 1921 and 1922, and resulted, the commissioner said, from a judgment entered by the Federal Court in Philadelphia in accordance with a decision handed down by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

A refund of $32,382 was allowed for 1921, together with $62.50 court costs and $8,478 interest. For 1922 a refund of $1,977 was allowed and interest amounting to $801.

JUDGE REFUSES MAN DIVORCE

William E. Bailey, of McConnellsburg, was refused a divorce from Mrs. Hannah L. Bailey, 3130 Middletown road, Sheraden, an official guide for the Grant Building Tower, in an opinion handed down by Judge Joseph Stadtfeld in Common Pleas Court holding that the charge of desertion was not established.

They were married August 13, 1921, have two children, 6 and 8 years old, and were living on Vulcan street, Crafton, when they parted November 15, 1927. Bailey alleged that he went to Bridgeport, Conn., at that time to take a position with the Pittsburgh Water Heater Company and that Mrs. Bailey refused to accompany him, saying she would not go that far away from her mother.

Mrs. Bailey denied the charge and testified that he was financially embarrassed and arranged for her and their children to go to live at her mother's home. She produced a number of letters from him which failed to show he desired and she refused to go to Bridgeport and also produced evidence that no such address existed in Bridgeport where Bailey claimed to have established a residence for his family.

PREDICTS RUSH FOR AUTO TAGS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 13.—(AP.)—Twenty-two per cent fewer automobiles in Pennsylvania have been issued 1931 license tags than the number licensed at the same time last year for 1930.

The State Bureau of Motor Vehicles announced that up to December 1 licenses had been issued for 245,032 passenger motor cars against 313,124 licensed by December 1, 1929, for the present year. Registration of all vehicles, including passenger vehicles, trucks, buses and taxicabs, for next year likewise dropped by the same percentage figure, the decline from the last year amounting in all to 78,252.

With registration so far behind a year ago, Benjamin G. Eynon, commissioner of motor vehicles, predicted an unusual eleventh-hour rush for the tags unless motorists send in their applications in greater numbers than before during December. Such a demand near the start of the new year would exceed facilities of the bureau for issuing tags and result in delays.

TORCH CLAIMS OLD LAKE SHIP

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—(AP.)—The unrelenting march of progress claimed another victim yesterday—the U. S. S. Commodore, survivor of the early days of Great Lakes freighters. She was burned at the water's edge of Lake Michigan to make way for an extension of a motor highway.

The old ship, of wooden construction, was beached at the foot of Randolph street in 1917. The ground she occupied was in the highway's path. Until 1912 the vessel had plied between Chicago and Buffalo, and was the last ship of her kind to be used on the lakes. She was 285 feet long, had a beam of 40 feet, and was built in Cleveland in 1874.

Donora Youths Held In Chicken Thefts

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 13.—Seven Donora boys from 16 to 20 years of age are held on charges of chicken stealing of more than five months. They were caught after officers found Howard Behanna and Edward Bowen with a chicken and two sacks in an alley at 2:10 a. m. Questioning revealed evidence to warrant arrest of Joe Husdlick, Howard Mosebaugh, Edward Ebowockowski, George Neal, William Neal and Louis Mongelouzzo.

Waynesburg Plans Restoration of Dam

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Dec. 13.—Plans are being completed for restoration of Waynesburg's picturesque "Village Dam" of a generation ago, which stood in Ten Mile Creek, near the town. The dam furnished the community with an outdoor swimming pool in summer and skating facilities in the winter. The movement for its restoration resulted following the drought of the past summer, when Ten Mile Creek ran dry in its banks.

Dormont Pool Leak Repaired by Diver

A leaking valve in the Dormont swimming pool, through which hundreds of gallons of water were lost daily, was repaired yesterday. Descending into the pool's icy water in a diving suit, Hugh Curley, of Banksville, a diver for the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company, stopped the leak in three hours. There will be ice-skating on the pool this winter, officials said.

Boy, 6, Hit by Truck, Driver Is Arrested

2 HELD IN PLOT TO ROB AUTOIST

Anna Selmek, 18, and Clarence Howard, 33, both of Tarentum, were in the county jail today awaiting grand jury action in connection with an alleged attempt to "frame" Steven Bayra, of Springdale, Sunday night. They were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Emil C. Starke, of Tarentum, last night, and held in bail of $2,000.

Police testified the girl lured Bayra to take her for an automobile ride in First avenue, Brackenridge, where he was beaten, they said, by Howard. The pair planned to rob their victim and go to another state in his car and be married, it was testified.

SPAN HEARING PROMISED

Government engineers at Washington have promised a hearing to the organizations favoring the combination bridge and dam over the Allegheny River at Aspinwall.

W. G. Negley has returned from Washington where he presented petitions of the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce and the Allied Boards of Trade asking that the high dam and bridge be approved. Those favoring the project point out that the county and federal government will be able to save a total of $750,000 by cooperating on the work.

TIGER HEART -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

On the eve of her marriage to handsome Jim Tracey, vivacious Connie Calvert, rich society girl, receives a letter which causes her to leave her palatial home in Connecticut on a mysterious automobile drive to New York. Jim sees her. Connie stops at a cheap restaurant on the West Side and waits for someone. The letter threatens to expose Connie. A man approaches Connie and introduces himself as Duke Garson. He tells Connie her late father was married twice and that she has a half-sister, Kitty, living in poverty among gangsters. Connie asks to meet her. When she does, Kitty tries to blackmail her. Kitty and Garson tell Connie that they want $100,000 from her. She says she will not give it. Later Connie consents. Kitty agrees to wait for the money until after the wedding.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

Connie looked straight across the table, amazed at the sudden widening sympathy in Kitty's eyes.

"On the level, I mean it," Kitty said. "If you got your heart set on marrying this guy tomorrow, you go right ahead and do it. All I'm after is an even break for myself—I don't want to turn rat just because I've had the worst of it."

It was so unexpected, such a reversal of her previous attitude that Connie could not, at once, comprehend the swift change of emotions. It was feminine, it was natural—yet she was surprised.

"Why do you say a thing like that to me, when you hate me so?"

"I don't hate you," Kitty protested. "I guess I thought I hated you—till I met you. But, after all, you're just a girl like I am and we are really sisters. You go ahead and have your wedding, kid, and we can settle up about the money later."

Garson Angered

But, even so, there was no particular warmth in Kitty's voice; reluctantly, her sympathy was forcing its way through a new channel, and it came grudgingly. The long smoldering resentment against her lot in life was too strong for Kitty to dispel entirely at once.

"You're not as hard as I thought you were," Connie said, slowly. "I want to be fair with you, Kitty—I want to do everything on earth I can to make it all up to you."

Duke Garson stirred uneasily. Thin, sardonic lines developed around his mouth.

"Lay off," Kitty snapped at him.

Connie could scarcely believe that Duke Garson was cruel and heartless enough to try to break this developing bond of understanding between herself and Kitty. Despite the underworld mark upon him he had not, heretofore, seemed as antagonistic as Kitty herself. True, he had painted dire pictures of shameful reprisals if Connie didn't give up a large sum of money to Kitty. But all of that had been merely a lever—a business argument. He had been speaking in behalf of a friend; according to his lights, perhaps, he had presented the strongest case possible for Kitty. Justice, as he undoubtedly saw it, was all on the side of the under daughter, and he had not hesitated to use his most vigorous arguments. In effect he had been defending, not attacking.

All of this now Connie was able to realize. But he had been utterly impersonal toward her, without any bad temper. Basically, she was able to sense something innately fair in the man in spite of all he had said. She was still not quite able to understand his unfeeling attitude toward the first flow of sympathetic understanding in the whole discussion.

Connie's Decision

"Why do you step on her when she shows kindness to me?" Connie demanded of him. "Can't you see that there is so much more to all this than extracting money?"

"She's right, Duke," Kitty put in. "After all, she's my sister."

Garson's face did not relax.

"I'm not as heartless as you think, Miss Calvert. The thing is, I don't want Kitty to get emotional. If there is any real affection between you two it'll have plenty of chance to develop—after Kitty gets her rights. Until then, it's just a cold business proposition. If she ever gets her feelings softened up, she might blow the whole business. I don't want to see her give herself the worst of it; that's why I've declared myself in on this deal. You must remember that she is the one who has suffered—not you. You've lived in luxury and security and she has lived practically in the gutter. And, speaking of sympathy, if you have any of it, why don't you come right up and declare yourself, Miss Calvert? Why don't you suggest yourself that you are willing to give up the share of what belongs to her?"

At her heart Connie felt a quick tug of decision.

"I will—I will!" she exclaimed.

"I told you she was a good kid," Kitty shot at Garson.

"All right—let's hear Miss Calvert's proposition," Garson suggested.

"I haven't any proposition—can't you see all this has come upon me so suddenly that my head is swimming with it?" Connie told him. "I was all keyed up before I came here tonight. That letter I received—and my wedding set for tomorrow. Can't you imagine what a shock all of this must be to me?"

Wants to Help Kitty

"Nevertheless," Garson insisted, "you are in your right senses and your mind seems to be working very well. I outlined the proposition to you, but you haven't put your O. K. on it yet."

"But I want to do so much more for her than give her money," Connie declared. "All you are thinking about is the cash; you're trying to measure everything with money. You've not seen beyond the dollar."

"I try not to misjudge your motives, Miss Calvert," Garson said, quietly, "but I admit I'm just prejudiced against you because I know what Kitty has been through. Still, I notice that you squirm when I try to pin you down to something definite about a settlement."

Kitty put a hand on Garson's arm.

"Give her a chance to get her wits, Duke."

"What I'm willing to do—what I want to do—is to figure a way that I really can do something real for her," Connie said, making an effort to make clear her words. "So far as money is concerned, she can have any part of anything I own. You don't have to browbeat me to make me give up, but there is so much else besides that." She turned her gaze on Kitty. "I can barely imagine how horrible it must have been for you to grow up without any real love in your life. I want to be your sister—I want to be your friend. Let me try to help you. If you will let me, I will be a real sister to you in every sense of the word."

Duke Garson's eyes suddenly lit up, then narrowed shrewdly.

"If I thought you meant that," he said, with low pitched decisiveness, "I'd tell Kitty to forget all about the money. If you want to, you are in a position to do more for her in every way than she could do for herself in a million years. The only question is, how do we know you aren't stalling?"

DAILY TRUE STORY A Fine Art

"Professor Effinger is coming over," Mrs. Tuttle said.

"Now, mother, in the words of Lord Bacon, 'What of it?'"

"Sue, dear, please don't get on that strain, it's downright flippancy, not humor. And the professor is extremely fond of you."

"Isn't that too bad. Sorry, but Wally Ames is calling about nine. We're going down to the lake for skating, and up to Gilly's Grotto for eats and dancing—there'll be 10 of us, and you know that Wally is a nice boy, so, even if I am a bad girl, it still makes me safe."

Mrs. Tuttle couldn't keep back a smile. Her vivacious and beautiful daughter could say the queerest, jolliest things, and no one knew better than Mrs. Tuttle, herself, that Sue was a thoroughbread in every way—only she had the habit of leading conversation astray, and saying startling things, just because it gave her a kick.

"Sue, dear, Doctor Young, the explorer, and his wife, are coming along with the professor, and the Right Rev. Groatley and his wife and their lovely twins, George and Georgiana. They will all be terribly offended if you aren't here, and you will enjoy it."

"And stand up Wally? Wally's a dear—and just because I'm going to marry him, I don't have to start being mean to him now—"

"You are trying to squirm out. Remain home tonight, darling. You won't have to—er—what did you call it?"

"Stand up?"

"Yes, you won't have to do that. Ask Wally to remain here when he comes, or I will. He'll do it for me."

Sue kissed her beloved mother.

Wally Arrives

"For you I'll do it—I'd make any sacrifice for you, even going without lipstick, but you won't break the ghastly news to Wally, you won't start any mother-in-law stuff with him now, and scare him. I'll explain."

Mrs. Tuttle hugged her daughter and departed, relieved in mind and supremely happy in the possession of such a daughter.

Wally Ames arrived at nine.

"Come in and listen to me, Little Boy Blue," Sue greeted him.

Sue explained.

"Tough," Wally said.

"But there's a chance."

"Not after you promised your mother—nice girls—"

"There's a chance, a big chance, that we will be permitted to go and skate, and gorge with grilled steaks, even urged to do so. Listen to me, Wally Ames."

Wally listened as Sue talked, and as he listened he first smiled, then grinned and finally laughed.

The professor had already arrived. Dr. and Mrs. Young came soon after.

There was a lot of chatter.

Then the Right Rev. Groatley and wife and the twins, aged 20, George and Georgiana, joined the crowd.

The customary chatter began, after introductions.

George and Georgiana sat on the love seat, they fitted it. If one had switched clothes on them, no one would have guessed it. Their taffy-colored hair had the same cut, their faces the same lack of expression.

Sue's father was chatting with the professor. Sue's mother was talking of the new contract rules with Mrs. Groatley. Sue and Wally sat over near the twins, the poor dears seemed to be in such misery, like a small boy in church when his pals were down in the old swimming hole.

Tell of Experiences

"I don't suppose you go in much for contract, Doctor?" Sue's mother said, in her "Oh-let's-get-chatty" voice.

"Fortunately, I was putting in a few years with the Umbagellinis, studying their traits, and so escaped the intricacies of a game that some silly people seem to think can undermine bridge."

"How lovely," Sue remarked. "I knew a girl once whose name was Umbergal. I wonder if she was related to those people?"

"Why—er—these Umbagellinis are a dark—"

"Spnad? Spell it?" Sue begged.

"Names," and Prof. Effinger cleared his throat, "are of great interest. Early man was named for some physical, mental or personal trait—"

"Ha, ha," chortled Sue. "Imagine calling Lulu Luce, who has had six husbands, 'Mrs. Alimony-grabber!'"

Mrs. Tuttle twitched nervously. The professor scowled.

"Some of the primitive peoples I discovered in the jungles," Doctor Young broke in, "the—er—jungles of Zarni, actually had such prehensile toes that they could hang by them!"

"Early man—"

The twins giggled again.

"Man, my dear Miss Tuttle, is a term used embracing both sexes, and—"

"My experience tells me that both sexes are not averse to embracing," Wally remarked.

The twins laughed. Mrs. Tuttle got red, and the professor choked a little.

"Sir, I meant—"

"Quite right, I was speaking scientifically, Professor," Wally assured him.

"Now you take the Ubblijibs—"

"What would a girl in my position do with an Ubbijib, if she took one, Doctor?" Sue asked, earnestly.

"Their hands are most remarkable, they do wonderful things with their hands, such as—"

"Or this, look," and Sue bent her fingers back to almost a right angle."

"I—er—meant—they could snatch a fish from the water, so agile were they."

"Ha, ha—I actually read of a man named Snatcherfish," Sue announced.

The twins sniggered.

"I know a boy named Yoodles," George said, timidly.

"I'd change it to 'Noodles,' Wally said. The twins laughed shrilly as Wally turned to Prof. Effinger.

"Do they eat noodles over in Thwackzley, Prof?"

"Er—Thwackzley? I never heard of that country."

"Well, I don't know as there is any country named Thwackzley, but isn't it a peach of a name for a country?"

The twins emitted shrill haw-haws and Mrs. Tuttle went and looked out of the windows. Mrs. Young and Mrs. Groatley were bursting with eagerness to talk. Mr. Tuttle was chewing his cigar and suspiciously eyeing Wally and Sue.

Plan Works

"Now take early Ceylon—"

"Isn't it a perfect moonlight," Mrs. Tuttle exclaimed, interupting the doctor, then she turned as if she had a brand new and splendid idea.

"Sue, dear," she said, "why don't you and Mr. Ames take the twins down to the lake and then up to the Grotto? Mrs. Ames can take them home later."

"If you insist," Sue said.

Sue, Wally and the twins departed. Once outside the door Georgiana turned to Wally.

"You cock-eyed old son-of-a-gun," she said, "you are a wiz. I'd kiss you if you didn't belong to Sue."

George was shaking Sue's hand.

"Gal, you are the world's brainiest child. You sure pulled that stuff beautifully and got us out of a hole. Now you and Mr. Ames go on your way and do your necking, Sis and I are already dated up. See you at the Grotto."

"Conversation," Wally said to Sue, "should be added to the finer arts."

He kissed her, which has nothing to do with this story except to prove that Wally was a wise young man.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

With Congressman Frisby in Gloomy Africa

By Horace Walpole Frisby,
(The People's Pal)

GUNGADIN, S. A.—Being a friend of humanity and a philosopher at heart, I was asked to speak before practically all the luncheon clubs in Africa. I told them how we, in Frisbyland (as they call America "over there"), are striving to solve the noise problem. I explained how unnecessary noise is and how it is driving me ca-razy! They cheered my efforts in America and asked me to serve as honorary chairman of their Anti-Noise Fact Finding Committee, which I suggested be appointed. The movement has grown so that we now have upward of nine million members in Africa alone. However, their minds work different from ours. Their chiefs argued that the man who hears the noise is the real source of trouble, and the first one to complain. They suggested (very uniquely, I thought) that noise victims all carry Frisby Noise Nullifiers. When infuriated by sound, the testy citizen equipped with the Frisby Nullifier takes the Nullifier, which works like a hand grenade, explodes with a loud report, thus drowning out the annoying noise and often teaching him a good lesson besides. The picture shows myself manufacturing the nullifiers, which I sold to the natives at practically cost plus.

Big Idea Department

Sir:

I see by the papers where somebody or other, I simply never could remember names, has suggested that we rearrange all legal holidays so they will fall on Monday. Now personally, I think it would be swell if we could arrange Saturday night so it would fall on Monday morning. But be that as it may, my big idea is that we save up all our holidays during times of prosperity and then get rid of them in a lump during such periods as the present. This would increase consumption and decrease production, excuse idleness and be a whole lot of fun besides.

Man's Best Friend, Fire

FIRE, GUARDIAN AND SERVANT OF MAN.

We warm our hands, strike a match, turn on the electric light, throw wood or coal on the fire and think rarely of the blessings that fire has brought to man, It has been his great protection, his priceless servant,

As shown in the picture above, it protected our cave ancestors from wild beasts, A fire at the cave entrance was worth more than a hundred men with sharp flints,

Thanks to fire, man was able to rise from the age of flints and clubs to the bronze age, and on to the iron age, the age of steam and on to electricity,

Innumerable have the usages of fire, the powerful friend that man alone possesses, None of the lower animals have ever been able to use it, Even the most highly intelligent chimpanzee will watch the hunter's fire die out, enjoying its warmth, but will never add a stick of wood to it, That is fortunate for us, Had it been otherwise the world's forests would have been burned before we came,

With fire, men have built their civilizations, and with it they have burned their enemies, slowly, in religious quarrels, Fire makes it possible for a thousand families to live in one apartment, all heated from one central furnace,

No wonder the sacred fire of Rome was kept burning by the vestal virgins, carefully protected on the altars of all primitive religions,

When there was no matches, no flint and steel, it was a dangerous thing to let the fire go out,

In the "American Weekly," interesting magazine that you will receive with tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, you will read the French scientist, Prof, Thevenin's, interesting analysis of primitive man and his first use of fire,

You will easily understand that men should have turned to "fire worship" in their gratitude for heat, and also that Eskimos living inside the Arctic Circle should imagine hell to be a place tightly frozen as we imagine it to be brightly blazing,

The American Weekly which you will receive with the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph tomorrow concentrates especially on important scientific problems,

WHAT WILL STRANGE NEW RAYS MEAN TO FUTURE MEN?

The strange new rays that bombard our atmosphere, coming from the mysterious recesses of cosmic space, may be as important to modern man and his science as fire itself was to our ancestors of a million years ago,

In H. G. Wells' story, "The War of the Worlds," the Martians, living on a planet many millions of years older than ours, conquered this world with rays hurled from a distance. That "pure imagination" now enters the domain of reality, just as do the stories of Jules Verne,

We hear from Europe of rays secretly developed by the German government, able to stop at the same time automobiles or machine at a distance,

Other rays, deadly in their power, will, it is believed, be used in the next war for annihilating armies,

Men usually begin new inventions with the idea of killing each other, Thee first iron undoubtedly was used because it would stab and kill better than sharpened flint or bronze, Now it is used for ploughs,

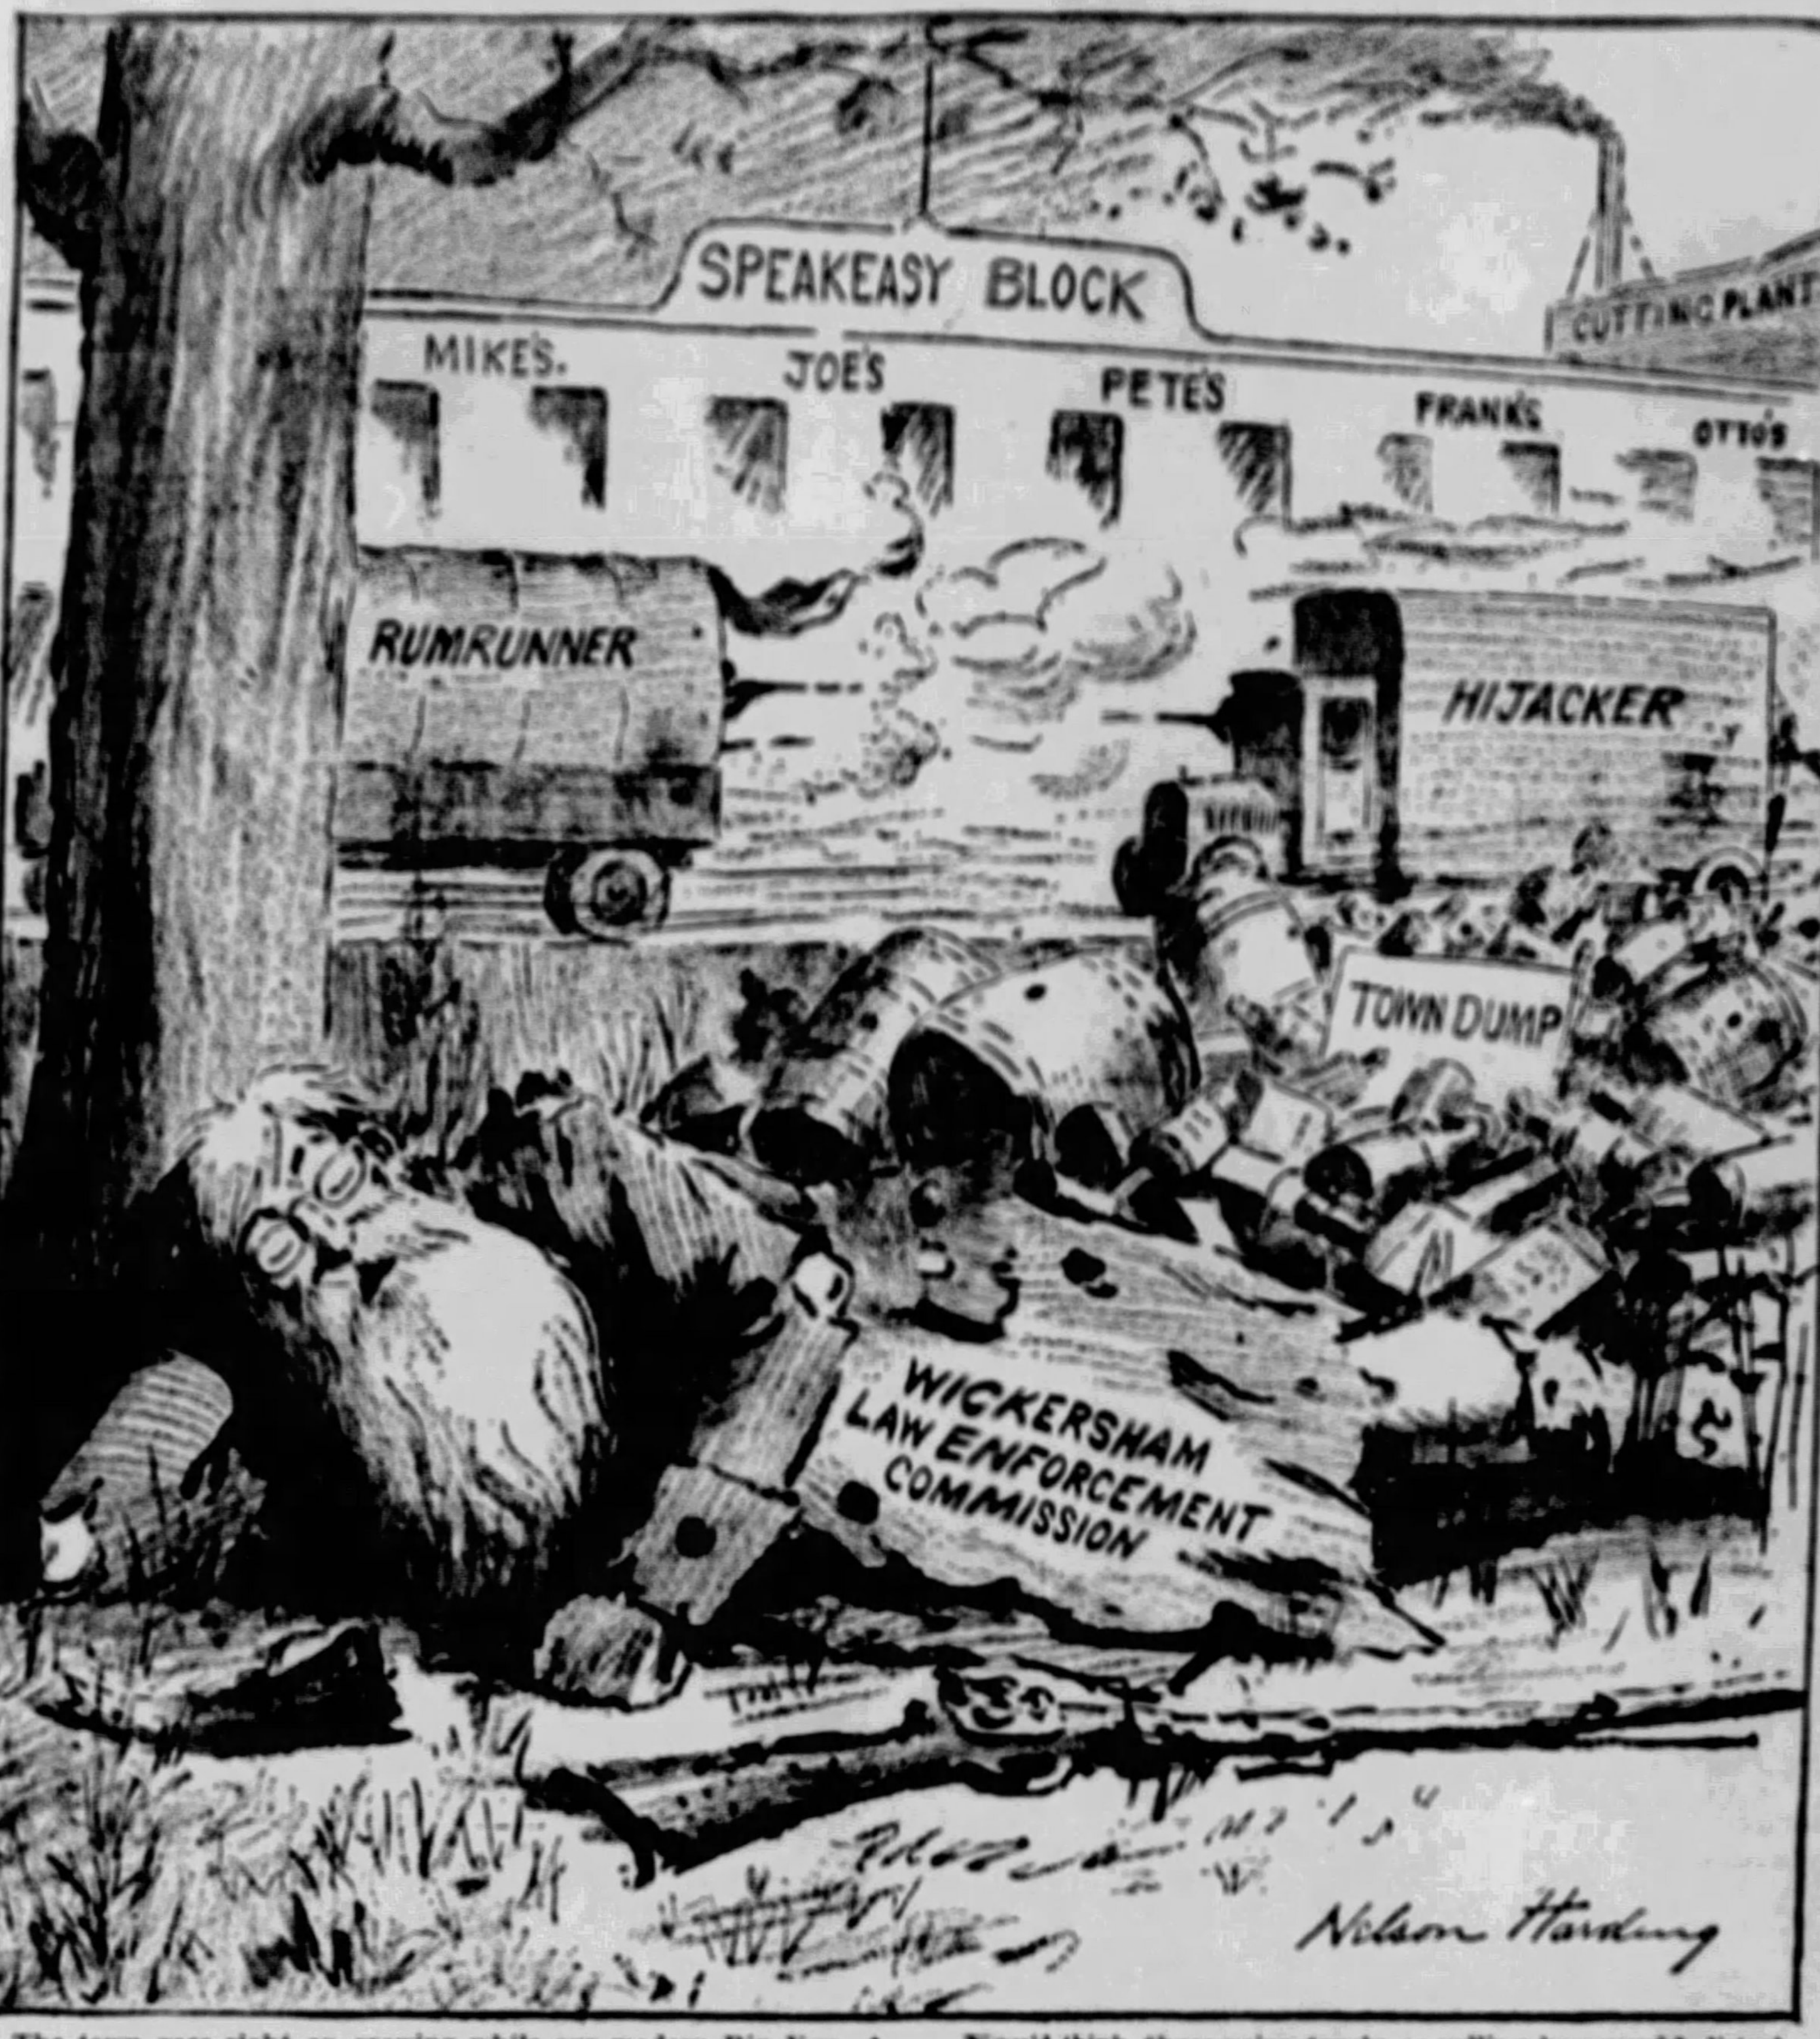
Rip Van Winklesham

By Nelson Harding



The town goes right on growing while our modern Rip Van Winkle remains in Conference with Morpheus and the Sandman.

The old corner saloon is gone and a big business block has sprung up in its place. The brewery is now a modern cutting plant, the country lane a state road for heavy trucking and shooting. Even the town dump has grown until it threatens to bury Rip if he doesn't wake up.

You'd think those noisy trucks or rolling kegs would disturb his slumbers. The original Rip, as we recall, heard the gnomes rolling beer barrels down Mt. Dunderberg, but our dreamer doesn't even talk in his sleep, showing it's fundamentally sound.

We can all take a little nap while waiting for that report without fear that it will wake us with a start. From the looks of that fact-hunting gun there won't be any report.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

My son, how foolish is a man in his way with WOMEN.

For, verily, verily, the things which make him lovable in their sight are never those things wherein he seeketh to star himself; but often, those things which he accounteth his "weaknesses" and seeketh to dissemble.

* * *

Whereas, peradventure, it is his secret weakness and his boyishness which touch her heart and cause her to yearn to mother him.

He believeth that it is his boldness and audacity which shall take her by storm. Whereas, a shy man that is filled with modesty and reserve, appealeth to her imagination and taketh her by SURPRISE.

* * *

One man seeketh to dazzle a woman with orchids and champagne suppers and his popularity with the waiters at night clubs. Yet all this glitter leaveth her cold. And lo, another offereth her only "understanding" and a potted hyacinth and a stale line of jolly, and getteth away with it.

One man seeketh to impress a woman with his wisdom, and his mouth is full of advice and information and sophistication. Yet she is bored.

But another confesseth his sins and his follies and beggeth her to "reform" him. And lo, she comforteth him with kisses and tender reassurances.

One man seeketh to shine as a wit and a wise-cracker, and delighteth to be accounted "the life of the party." Yes, he is SO funny!

* * *

But the damsels turn from him with shrugs and yawnings. For an eloquent silence piqueth the curiosity, where much chatter is as a flat wheel to the nerves or static in the radio.

* * *

When, then will man learn that it is not those things on which a man PRIDETH himself, even boldness and snappiness and audacity, which win the hearts of women; but his modesty, his childishness and his tenderness, which he seeketh to hide, and feareth that the world shall discover? Selah!

THE NINTH PLANET

By Archibald Henderson

Although many astronomers have believed in the existence of one or several trans-Neptunian planets, the late Percival Lowell actually predicted the discovery of such a planet in a region of the sky which he plotted with no little accuracy. So complicated were the calculations, so meager the date, that Lowell was not able to arrive at results of entire exactitude. But the figures he gave in his famous memoir of 1915 have guided the astronomers at Flagstaff, Ariz., ever since Lowell's death, in an unremitting search for the elusive planet.

It must be remembered that Le Verrier predicted the location of Neptune at a certain region of the sky. But there were certain discrepancies in his calculations, with the result that Neptune was actually found to be two minutes off position. As Lowell himself said, regarding the good luck in Le Verrier's case: "The explanation would seem to lie in the nearness of Neptune and the near circularity of its orbit. Neptune turns out to have been most complaisant and to have assisted materially to its own detection."

Twenty-five years ago, Lowell began to make his investigations regarding a trans-Neptunian planet. He was doubtless spurred on by the prophecy of Le Verrier, who with the insight of genius, foresaw the existence of other major planets beyond Neptune. In 1910, Lowell stated to Prof. Philip Fox, now director of the Adler Planetarium at Chicago, that his computations indicated the presence of a body beyond Neptune. This was surmised to be the case because Neptune had not moved, in accordance with the perturbation. Something must be holding it back. This surmised by Lowell to be a trans-Neptunian body of strong gratitational attraction.

In his extended memoir published in 1915, Lowell gave the following data regarding the supposed new planet:

"Mean longitude of epoch around 0 degrees; epoch 22.1 degrees; semi-axis 43.0; mass 1.00; eccentricity .202; place of eprihelion 203.8 degrees; heliocentric longitude July 0, 1914—84.0 degrees; mean longitude of epoch around 180 degrees; epoch 205.0 degrees; semi-axis 44.7; mass 1:14; eccentricity .195; place of perihelion 19.6 degrees; heliocentric longitude July 0, 1914—262.8 degrees; the unit of mass being one 50,000th the mass of the sun.

"It indicates for the unknown a mass between Neptune's and the earth's; a visibility of 12-13 magnitude according to albedo, and a disk of more than one second in diameter.

"From the analogy of the other members of the solar family, in which eccentricity and inclination are closely correlated, the inclination of its orbit to the plane of the ecliptic should be about 10 degrees. This renders it more difficult to find."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—This is the day this column tries to be silly and gay. The week's work is ended, the town riveting stops at noon, the morning post—mail in Gallipolis—brings the pay check and life is otherwise pleasantly savoured. On Saturday I usually garland my hair to skip and tra-la here and there.

Sometimes I stop and do a handstand on a water plug. I'm that happy. But not this Saturday. For one thing the Sealyham got into a box of old fashioned taffy during the night and the house is all stuckup and gooey. I'll likely have to be pried out of the chair I'm sitting in.

Yet every time I go out to scold the rascal, in disgrace under the kitchen table, he rolls over on his back, waves his paws tremulously on the air so friendly like, I lose heart. He "cutes" me with coyness. The only solution is to hire some brute to scotch him.

To hie away from it all for a little time—and while gone my wife discovered the erring pooch had wiped his charlesevanshughes on the parlor drapes—I dropped over to a nearby hotel to see a friend from out of town. I don't know why all hotel clerks hate me on sight, but they do.

The minute I walk up to the front desk they swell up with rage. I affect theater box office men the same way. Nobody is nicer or more self-effacing with a hotel clerk than I. Invariably I remove my hat, cough apologetically behind a hand and stand to one side and wait, nursing a parochial notion they will finally see me.

But no matter how occupied they are when I appear, they immediately find a dozen things to do. Not once—save that time at Palm Beach—have I ever spoken to one first and this digression was meekly to tell him a measuring worm was crawling up his collar. But today after 30 minutes I exploded.

Clapping my hands together sharply like that—one, two, three! —the monster in me springing to the fore, I cried: "See here! Is anyone going to pay attention to me around here or are they?" I get all balled up when excited that way and remember nothing until next day at noon. Often not until 4 o'clock.

One clerk detached himself, but catching a glimpse of his puss in passing a mirror, halted to give his tie a quick yank, then cooly surveying his meticulous nails ends inquired with a Voltaireian profundity: "Yee-e-e-e-s?" And before I could tell him he was yelling to some passerby: "Hello, Roy, how's every little trick?" That type. I flipped on my heel and stamped out. A nice way to treat a son of a hotel man who has patronized hotels since the good old days of roller towels.

* * *

And look. As though the day was not enough of a complete flop I had to annex a drunk on my way home. He lurched out of a subway exit, steadied himself and leered at me. "Nothing," he hiccuped, "sets a fella off like a nice pair of spats. What do you do for a living, buddy, beside putting icing on cakes?"

* * *

I bore up bravely, trying to look at ease, running the gauntlet of titterers, but it is only a question of time until I have to give up fripperies or keep off the public highways. Any day they may quit hooting and start shooting.

* * *

Then there was the ensuing incident of the pocket lighter. For many weeks it has been sparking but nothing happens and if you want to be a town boy your lighter must work. I stopped in at Dunhill's and told the "clark" my dilemma. He looked at it, then looked at me. "How do you expect it to light," he inquired, "with no wick?" I should have thanked him but with the day's irks my hot blood steamed up and I bellowed: "Well, who put the wick in the thing in the first place?" Think that one over for absolute zero in zippy comebacks.

* * *

When I got home I told my wife I believed I was getting dotty. "Getting?" she replied, with an inquiring inflection, and so I locked all the doors to my workshop and have been sitting here pouting ever since. And when I pout I pout. My lips stick out and everything.

* * *

Outside, a mean, chilling drizzle falls. The clouds overhead are as dark as my thoughts. The room is becoming suffocatingly hot A lot of good I am in this world I have a notion to open a window—and sit right smack in a draft.

Isn't It So?

What is one woman's lemon may be some other woman's sugar daddy.

Times change, and people may yet use snakebite as an antidote for liquor.

Legislative Plans

Selfish Aims Are Seen in Some of the Proposals—Brief Comment on Local News Items,

The contrast between the points of view of the State Chamber of Commerce and the State Federation of Labor, as reflected in the legislative programs proposed by the two bodies this week, is striking—and regrettable. They do not see from the same perspective at all. Legislation emphasized by one as of the first importance is ignored by the other, and on matters appearing in both programs they are diametrically opposed. It is to be hoped their interests are not so irreconcilable as appears on the surface,

The conflict is due, of course, to the fact that each group is concerned almost exclusively with the advancement of its own welfare without regard to whether or not that can be accomplished without injury to other groups. The selfish attitude is natural, but can hardly be regarded as admirable. How refreshing it would be, when great organizations like these meet to draw up legislative programs, if they would say, "Let us propose measures that will bring the greatest good to the greatest number of our fellow-citizens, regardless of what their effect may be on our particular group!"

Such altruism is contrary to ordinary human nature and is not to be expected this side of the millennium. Hence it behooves legislators to look for a selfish or personal motive in even the most innocent-looking proposals for legislation and to inquire if they will benefit one class of citizens at the expense of another, unfairly. The sharp difference of opinion between the State Chamber of Commerce and the State Federation of Labor are a reminder of the need of caution in passing on bills.

Gov.-elect Pinchot's first cabinet selections inspire confidence. He points out that Dr. Clyde L. King, who is to be secretary of revenue, was responsible, as secretary of the commonwealth in Pinchot's former administration, for "the financial feat of paying off 32 millions of inherited indebtedness and leaving a balance of 11 millions" to the succeeding administration. That is a fine recommendation. William A. Schnader, who is to continue as attorney general, also has much to commend him, while George W. Woodruff, who is to serve as special counsel in public utilities regulation, is learned in the law.

District Attorney Park is to be congratulated on his persistence in pressing election fraud cases after the grand jury had refused to indict. Declaring the jurors were too lenient, Park obtained permission and arranged to present the cases anew to the January grand jury. Election frauds are among the most serious of crimes, but have not commonly been so considered in Allegheny County, to judge by the leniency that has been extended to the cheaters even when convicted. It is to be hoped Park will be able to impress not only the January grand jury but thoughtless citizens generally that crookedness at the polls is a grave offense.

The County Commissioners have promised to act next week, probably Monday, on the Town Hall matter. In so doing they will remove a grievance that has been lying at their door for many months. No matter which of the various proposed sites they select, there is bound to be disappointment. It will be no greater now, however, than it would have been if the choice had been made at an earlier stage. If the disappointed citizens are good sportsmen they will not voice a futile complaint against the choice so long delayed, but will do what they can to make the auditorium the great benefit to Pittsburgh that we expect it will be.

The East Liberty Chamber of Commerce has done a creditable piece of work in decorating the East End business section with Christmas trees, of which hundreds have been placed on the curb in front of stores. The trees give a cheery holiday aspect to the section and mark it as progressive and appreciative of the brighter side of life.

THE OSTRICH TAIL, REVERSED.

For evolution, you must know, continues in our clothes after it has apparently ceased in our bodies. This biggest hat in the world belongs to Miss Jessie Matthews, an English actress.

It is 15 feet high, 25 feet wide and contains the tails of 150 ostriches.

Nature's evolution puts the beauty of the peacock and the ostrich at one end of the body. The evolution of feminine fashion comes along, deprives the ostrich and the peacock of their tails, and puts the ornamentation on the other end of the higher type.

What strange creatures we are, and what strange interests we pursue. To paraphrase Burke:

"Unless you read the American Weekly, part of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, every week, you cannot possibly know the world wonders as you should know them."
